

WW II Part 1

Communism and the legacy for today!

The Gravity of INTEL

World War II Part I Communism and the Legacy for Today! by Robert L. Rohrer is an extraordinary work, another definitive analysis of that war. Mr. Rohrer 'drives a stake through the heart of the persistent myth that Pearl Harbor was a surprise sneak attack. He clearly documents that President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, and other international leaders, knew of the Japanese plans well before the events of December 7, 1941. And that FDR had goaded Japan into attacking; with orders to his military, that Japan be allowed to strike the first blow.

Mr. Rohrer details the actions taken to compel Japan to attack the United States, and Pearl Harbor was the known target. Most interesting are the real reasons, why the United States was forced into a two-front war in the Pacific and the Atlantic. In addition, Mr. Rohrer documents the manipulation of the war effort with misplaced priorities and aims, along with how the 'Intelligence' was orchestrated to justify predetermined strategic and operational decisions.

Therefore, he lays bare the 'Myth of Intelligence Failure'.¹ Thanks to extensive, research and an impressive bibliography, Mr. Rohrer allows us to far better realize that U. S. Intelligence has been intentionally mismanaged for many years; the so called 'surprise' attack on Pearl Harbor; and decades later the false narrative of Saddam Hussein Abd al-Majid al-Tikriti² posing a threat to US national security by his alleged possession of weapons of mass destruction (WMD). Just two of many examples that span the years, which have misshaped U. S. policy and have cost the United States $Trillions, along with our most precious national treasure, our manpower.

And as a professional Intelligence Analyst, after reading Mr. Rohrer's work, I too made the connection to, and will defend the false WMD narrative based on my experience.

Preamble

For Germany, it was their London "Blitz" in response to the British declaring war on them, as well as their horrific treatment of European Jews. For Japan, it was the Japanese invasion of China and their desire for a Pacific and Asian Hegemony.

With our claim of "Manifest Destiny", we killed virtually all our indigenous population, put the remainder on reservations, and took a variety of geographic and military steps to insure we had complete control of what became America.

The British invaded South Africa, and India, carved up and renamed much of the Middle East, and poisoned China in the Opium Wars. They spent centuries physically planting their flag wherever they wanted and claimed: The sun never sets on the British Empire! Seems we also had a couple of wars with them over this aggression!

Then we have the liberal French and their actions to dominate Europe, all the way to Russia; as well as their Colonial Empire in the Americas, Africa, and Asia, one of the largest in history!

It is not easy to differentiate the so-called good Nations from the disobedient ones!

Further, I want to make it perfectly clear, all my references to Communist Democrats are to the economic and social aspects of this philosophy! Stalin was a murderer, our leadership was, and is, just a class of clueless idealists spouting the ideas of Social Justice, Universal Basic Income, and a World Government, called a New World Order.

These are still the most basic platforms of the Democrat party. Moreover, while Marx and Engels did not personally kill anyone, they are surely responsible for getting many millions of people killed! Nonetheless, I am surely aware, and warning, wherever implemented, this political philosophy has led to mass murder!

The two most virulent anti-communist Nations on earth were the Germans and the Japanese. Our Communist Democrat leadership destroyed Germany's plan to defeat the Soviet Union; while at the same time they forced Japan to attack America over our principle demand they get out of China!

It should be completely obvious to any thinking person that we ended up with the Soviets winning WWII in Europe, as well as the ultimate success of the Communist Chinese in Asia. We created our two most powerful enemies and virtually destroyed what later became two of our most powerful allies. This was an immense act of diplomatic incompetence, stupidity, and treason!

To this day the Communist Democrats in America are doing, and backing, everything they can to achieve their ultimate plan, which was the dream of FDR and his Communist counterpart, Joseph Stalin -- A NEW WORLD ORDER -- Communism!

As will become obvious, I also have a very bad opinion of Churchill and the continuing attempts to resurrect a Churchillian hero with movies! My own opinion is he was an alcoholic psychopath and worse a dupe of the Soviets fueled by his incredible German animus, which went beyond hatred! He was also a dupe of FDR, who had his own plans with "Uncle Joe" Stalin, which would have unfolded long ago, if Roosevelt had lived.

Churchill did not wake up until his Missouri speech lamenting an "Iron Curtain" had descended on the European Continent.

Here are just a few outtakes from a March 2, 2018 article the Fatal Delusions of Western Man by Patrick J. Buchanan, which sums up Churchill!

"...Recall. Stalin was a murderous tyrant unrivaled in history whose victims in 1939 were 1,000 times those of Adolf Hitler, with whom he eagerly partnered in return for the freedom to rape the Baltic States and bite off half of Poland."

"When Hitler turned on Stalin, the Bolshevik butcher rushed to the West for aid. Churchill and FDR hailed him in encomiums that would have made Pericles blush. At Yalta, Churchill rose to toast the butcher."

"I walk through this world with greater courage and hope when I find myself in a relation of friendship and intimacy with this great man, whose fame has gone out not only over all Russia, but the world...We regard Marshal Stalin's life as most precious to the hopes and hearts of all of us."

Returning home, Churchill assured a skeptical Parliament, "I know of no Government which stands to its obligations, even in its own despite, more solidly than the Russian Soviet Government."

By now, cognitive dissonance should be in full gear for all those who bought the simple story of the evil Japs, and those God Damn Germans who started WWII. It is just not that simple! If you doubt me, read the books in my bibliography to see how all the dots connect. The story is the same from all perspectives!

1. My Objectives for this essay

In this part 1, my focus is WWII and the World-Wide Communism that followed. I briefly cover WWI because that war, and all the politics it caused, and was the principal catalyst for WWII. Part 1 will be WHY we fought WWII; Part 2 will be critiques on the WAY we fought the Pacific War! If you are a fan of traditional history, you will not like or agree with this essay.

To be perfectly clear, WWII was a war between National Socialism and International Communism. Germany lost and Soviet Russia won! Hitler died, and Stalin continued his Communist vendetta. Make no mistake, Russian Communists, and their world allies are still on the same vector established by Lenin and Stalin.

Hitler and Churchill were both psychopaths. Hitler's psychopathy was racial; Churchill's psychopathy was cultural.

Hitler wanted to annihilate European Jews, which he saw primarily as Communists. However, his main objective was to destroy Bolshevism, which was an obstacle to his dream of Eastern hegemony.

Churchill wanted to annihilate the German culture by killing as many German civilians as possible. He saw the German people as an obstacle to his dream of Victory and European hegemony.

Civilian bombing was Churchill's war plan and continued all the way to Dresden, when in just three hours, the British dropped thousands of high explosive bombs, followed by 650,000 incendiary bombs. This February 13, 1945, firestorm initially incinerated more than 25,000 with a final civilian death toll of more than 250,000.

Since the decision to firebomb Dresden was for the specific reason of helping the Soviets, who were advancing from the East, the next day five hundred American B-17s and three hundred fighter escorts arrived to further bomb and strafe the fleeing survivors -- men, women and children.

Churchill later told Stalin the British war policy had been to "de-house" the German civilian population by carpet-bombing German cities, with the bombing to be specifically directed against German working-class homes! Oh, those evil Japs in Nanjing-- time to put things in perspective!

Hitler wanted Britain as an ally not an enemy. Hitler saw Britain ruling the seas and recovering their Colonial Empire they had lost after WWI. There was suggestions Germany would also be open to sharing the Low Countries to the north, and in the south, allowing British control over their historical enemy, France. Spain and Portugal would remain neutral.

I leave Italy an open question. Communist Partisans killed Mussolini, and Italy's alignment with Germany changed after that, so it is possible the Italians could have retained their independence.

Hitler's plan was for Germany to control Eastern Europe and Soviet Russia, all the way to Vladivostok, including Mongolia, adjacent to his Japanese ally in the Far East.

Japan clearly saw their hegemony as including Korea, China, Manchuria and portions of South East Asia.

Instead, for the last 73 years we have remained in conflict with Russian and Chinese Communists, and all their proxies around the world! We have lost 100,000 dead Americans fighting the North Koreans and North Vietnamese. Yet, our American Communist Democrats are still upset with the Leftist Nazis and a Dead Hitler who had no post WWII effect!

I included Communism in my subtitle because it is the root of the whole problem. Even more so now that our Communist Democratic party has finally "come out of the closet" and fielded an admitted Progressive Socialist Democrat for President in the 2016 Presidential election. Of course, Progressive is just a euphemism for Communist.

Domestic Communists sold us out once and we can never let it happen again! There are now only two groups left in America, Constitutionalists and Communists. Forget Republican and Democrat...that ship has sailed.

I have only been encouraged and motivated by three candidates for POTUS, Barry Goldwater, Ronald Reagan and Donald Trump! Sadly, we only got two out of three!

The socialist progressive movement of the 1920's and 1930's got us into this mess. The conviction then was capitalism had failed; the Soviet economic system was the answer, and Communism was the new way. In America, it was the "New Deal"! Until his death FDR revered Stalin, the chum he referred to as "Uncle Joe"! Today the New Deal has become the New World Order, or the Great Reset, other euphemisms for Communism!

Roosevelt's entire team had but one objective. Save the Soviets! Policy manipulators, fellow travelers, and spies, all traitors grinding away to make sure they saved the new system. It is, however, most important to recognize that while spies were dangerous the most insidious and destructive actors were those writing and setting American policy that benefitted the Soviets!

There is now a malignant confusion calling Conservatives Nazis and our President a Hitler. Anti-Fascist (ANTIFA) riots have erupted across America and unwitting youth throw their support behind what they think is an intelligent cause by attacking the idea of fascism, just as Communists have been doing for a century.

The proper measure of the Fascist concept is one of a matter of degree. The public does not seem to have a clue that Fascism is simply an economic concept of "binding" government with the private sector in a cooperative effort for mutual gain. Flanking our Congressional Dais are golden Fascistas symbolizing a Capitalist cooperation between our government and the American private sector.

The concept only loses its positive values when it is no longer a binding cooperation, but instead when a government dominates in a totalitarian system called Communism. Something our Democrat party has been attempting to achieve for a hundred years! Obama nearly succeed with his "Crony Capitalism", which would have been the beginning of a State controlled economy!

Fascism can also go astray as Corporatism, when the private sector becomes the dictatorial dominant, and Corporations unite to gain control of a Nation. In fact, Mussolini even identified his Fascism as corporatism. By 2022 this was in full phase in the United States. Big tech, media and a full range of Corporations began ruling the United States Government!

The word Fascist only garnered its negative connotations from the extreme actions of Mussolini in Italy and applying the term to the National Socialist German Workers Party, abbreviated as Nazi in English. Still thought to be Right Wing, the so-called Nazis were in fact leftists. They wanted to be German Socialists, not Soviet Communists! They fought a war to resist Soviet domination, which was clearly Stalin's plan! We helped Stalin win that war!

There is a strange absence of any rancor or hatred of Stalin or Communism in America, precisely because all our current rioters are Communists! Lenin called them useful idiots. They parade around in black dress, with masks hiding their identity, while some wear "Che" T-shirts, celebrating their hero, the murdering Argentine Marxist revolutionary and Cuban executioner!

I expect someday Obama will also be a T-Shirt mascot for youthful Americans he taught to hate our Constitution. They have no idea the Constitution affords them the Freedom to even have the ability to attempt the destruction of the Nation that enabled them!

To have an object of their hate, all American Left-Wing Communist Democrats, and all their rioting minions, must also identify Hitler as a Right-Wing Fascist, when, in fact he was a Left-Wing Socialist.

My approach is merely what I would call a "Books Report". This is a review of my reading and understanding of all those who told the entire story, those who provided all the details, and referenced and corroborated all the sources!

If any want to question or challenge my thoughts, they can start by reading my bibliography. I am just trying to save those who have an interest, the time of wading through more than 20,000 pages. This was time consuming!

I anchor my entire thesis in the history provided by the authors in my Bibliography! I admit there are countervailing interpretations. However, I do not have the time or patience to read leftist Communist Democrat propaganda that fly in the face of reality.

Most importantly, I mean no indictment of our fighting forces! All our troops did the jobs they were assigned, and they were our Greatest Generation! The politicians and traitors who set them up, and career seeking Flags are the ones who have my ire!

My heroes are Nimitz and MacArthur, Patton and LeMay – surely NOT Marshall and Eisenhower! Much more regarding my opinions on this will be in Part 2!

Furthermore, concerning patriotism and our National Anthem, most Americans no longer think about our Revolutionary War. Our dumbed down electorate has no idea who the enemy was or even the meaning of the term "Red Coats".

They also know nothing of the War of 1812, and the burning of Washington, DC. Therefore, Liberals, and stupid athletes, see our National Anthem as emblematic of our military aggression with no sense of its true meaning, or any appreciation that America was then surviving another assault from our once principal enemy -- the British!

Alternatively, our National Anthem celebrates our relief on seeing our flag was still there after the British assault on Fort McHenry in Baltimore Harbor. WWII was Germany's turn to suffer British imperialism for hegemony on their continent!

2. 1914 --1918 WWI

Notwithstanding the later image of Julie Andrews singing and dancing around in the mountains in The Sound of Music, the Austrians started WWI.

The catastrophe began in August of 1914, with the assassination of the Austrian Archduke in Serbia. Austria then declared War on Serbia. Serbia had a defense treaty with Russia, Russia had a treaty with France; and Germany had one with Austria. Russia then became the chief instigator of the war, to detract from their internal problems.

Kaiser Wilhelm was doing all he could to stop the madness. No one on the Continent wanted this war. However, with the tangle of mutual defense treaties, the Russian mobilization created an irreversible move in precipitating the conflagration.

It was Churchill, the "hero" of the Boer War, now First Lord of the Admiralty, who jumped at the chance to put on his war paint and actualize his hegemonic Germanophobia. He led England into a declaration of war on Germany for violating the Schlieffen Plan that had violated Belgium neutrality with the invasion of France. Churchill felt honor bound to this 1839 British/Belgian mutual defense treaty.

The continental struggle was underway with Russia, France, Britain, and Japan facing off against Germany, Austria, Hungary and Italy. Britain and their dominions ultimately lost 921,000, nearly twice the deaths they would later suffer in WWII! Their national debt also increased over 14 times what it had been in 1914. They never financially recovered and lost their Colonial Empire!

Winston Churchill was also responsible for dragging the United States into WWI! America fielded a force of a million and suffered 116,000 dead. The overall catastrophe mobilized 65 million and by 1918, nearly 8 million lay dead, including countless civilians. Worse, the war had laid the ground to kill 50 million more in the next disaster, which would be brought on by all the greed, stupidity and revenge later manifested at Versailles.

By late 1916, 1,700,000 Russian soldiers were dead, and in February 1917, riots and mutiny forced Tsar Nicholas to abdicate. A new socialist government led by Alexander Kerensky aimed to negotiate a peaceful withdrawal from WWI. Russian soldiers stopped obeying orders and by the summer of 1917, they were deserting en masse to return home in support of the October Communist Revolution, taking Russia out of the war.

This turn of events left the British and French locked in a stalemate of trench warfare with the Germans. It was only resolved when Woodrow Wilson broke his promise to the American people in April of 1917, and the United States entered WWI. Later, at 11AM, on November 11, 1918, there was finally an Armistice after four years of bitter fighting.

We still sell Poppies inspired by the famous poem In Flanders Fields, the remembrance of seeing flowers growing on the scarred battlefields. The Remembrance Day of 11/11/11 became our Veterans Day to honor those who died in WWI, and all the subsequent wars spawned by the WWI disaster!

Adding to the carnage, Churchill implemented a Starvation Blockade in March of 1919. The death rate in German cities exceeded the birthrate, hundreds of thousands of German civilians died of starvation, arguably more than had died on the battlefield. The Germans felt betrayed and blamed America!

The food blockades Britain had introduced after WWI would later pale with what Churchill had in store for German civilians in WWII!

More than seventeen million lost their lives in WWI, leaving Europe a cultural and financial disaster. There was no Victory! Everyone just agreed to stop fighting in what essentially was a draw! Exhausted by war, and with a nation of hungry citizens, Germany reluctantly accepted the terms foisted them.

Germany was essentially humiliated at the Armistice signing in Ferdinand Foch's railway carriage in the remote Forest of Compiègne. It is certainly not lost on History that Hitler later made France pay for this injustice with his own later railway car ceremony.

Six months after the Armistice, the Treaty of Versailles offered hope that Europe had achieved a lasting peace. However, the greedy gang that descended under the euphemism of Versailles created a disaster.

The treaty usurped German territory, along with imposing impossible war debt and other restrictions. The result was the economic collapse of the Weimar Government and the rise of the National Socialist party headed by Adolf Hitler.

If Germany's treatment had been in the same spirit as the later Marshall Plan, or how MacArthur had resurrected Japan, there might never have been a Hitler. Then, there might never have been any countervailing power on the Continent, and no Barbarossa!

Instead, by 1940, Stalin would have implemented his plan, unopposed, and Churchill would have been able to view the "Iron Curtain" that later descended on Eastern Europe, visible from fishing boats in the English Channel.

It is surely a strange twist to realize that without Hitler, all of Europe could well have been communist by the early 1940's. There would have been no one to stop the Soviets. If the French and British had tried, the Soviets would have crushed them, with no escape at Dunkirk. America was not ready to deal with Stalin and might even have endorsed what our government was then tacitly supporting! Strange thought, but I am convinced Hitler saved Europe from an early Communism, and most likely Japan as well.

If this had occurred, Americans might want to contemplate what course of action the Communist leadership in America would have taken. It had been FDR's and Stalin's plan to create a New World Order of Communism, and this turn of events could have made this a fait accompli!

America has been in an enduring fight with Communism for decades! Most recently, we are again dealing with a Communism that has infected the highest levels of American government, just as it had during the entire tenures of the Roosevelt administrations! It is now called "The Deep State", just another euphemism for communism!

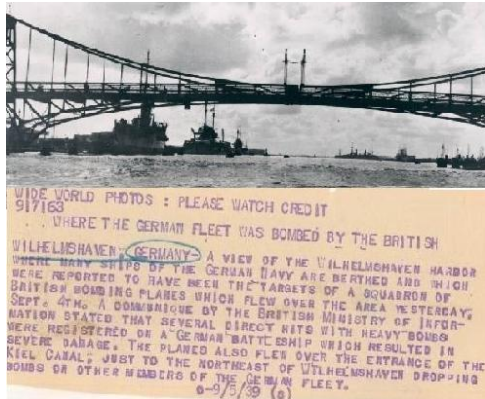

3. 1939 War Drums Again

The situation in Europe had not been stable in the 1930's, and any thinking person had to know there was another war on the horizon! This required diplomacy, judgment, the ability to discern the lesser of two evils, and to make decisions offering the highest National benefit. There were NO perfect choices. There never are!

Foreign agents, treason, stupidity, political ambition, and greed caused disasters in both Europe and the Pacific!

When Hitler attacked Poland in 1939, both Britain and France had mutual assistance pacts with Poland, and on September 3, 1939, each declared war on Germany. In Britain, the principal "sword rattler" was again First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill, who saw this opportunity to support another old treaty to declare war on Germany. Before it was over "Britain lost its Empire and the West lost the World".

Immediately following the British declaration of war on December 3, 1939, there was a little-known September 4, 1939 bombing raid on the German port city of Wilhelmshaven.

I found the almost unknown photo and caption in wide world photos, where it says: the German fleet was bombed by the British, dated the day after the bombing -- 9/5/39.

As far as the famous Battle of Britain, Hitler did not start the bombing; the British did, when the twenty-five RAF bombers attacked Wilhelmsaven Germany on September 4, 1939. The first bombing of WWII was on a German port city.

The initiation of the famous London blitz was Hitler's retaliation!

In the following September 7 raid on London, 300 German bombers dropped 337 tons of bombs on port targets. This was the first of 57 nights of bombing until May 1941. Hitler wanted a submissive, neutralized Britain so he could concentrate on his plans in the East, namely the land invasion of the Soviet Union.

Even though civilian populations were not the primary target, the raid hit the poorest of London's slum areas, on the East End. That afternoon and evening the fires that followed the fallout from errant bombs spread throughout the vicinity, killing four hundred and forty-eight civilians.

One can only wonder if the so-called Blitz bombing of England would have begun on September 7, 1939, if England had not declared war on Germany on September 3 and bombed Wilhelmsaven on September 4, 1939.

Germany and the Polish/German war were far beyond the range of any RAF or French aircraft, or infantry intervention. The precipitous action dragged two unprepared nations into a war that would leave France defeated; and leave the British Empire the only democracy in the world still at war with the Third Reich!

The British Expeditionary Force (BEF) began moving to France in September 1939. By May of 1940, after eight months of a "Phoney War", the British were in retreat and the French had declared defeat!

Chamberlain was resigning and Lord Halifax was first in line to be the new Prime Minister. Halifax had been in favor of negotiating a peace with Germany, but when he failed to step forward Churchill became Prime minister.

Now Churchill's "Ready, Fire, Aim" approach of encouraging Neville Chamberlain's precipitous declaration of war on Germany, had put Churchill in a spot that ultimately made him subservient to Roosevelt's wishes.

Hitler's peace offerings would not be acceptable in Washington. The caveat of a free hand against the Soviets would have been an instant deal breaker. Churchill had no sympathy with communism, but his hands were tied, and he had tied them!

The Roosevelt administration used the British as their "bull dog" to wage war on Germany, the principal enemy of Bolshevism on the Continent. Once Churchill was in it over his head, he had no choice but to follow the game plan of saving the Soviets.

It is a strange and twisted story of treason, how America led a war to destroy Germany and Japan all for the benefit of Stalin, Bolshevism and a communism -- and this Soviet Russian enemy is still an existential threat to America!

4. 1939 "Phoney War"

The term "Phony War" was coined by US Senator William Borah, who commenting on the early lack of activity on the Western Front, had quipped, "There is something phoney about this war."

The first recorded use of the term in print was in a US newspaper, which used the British spelling, although other contemporary American reports sometimes used "phony" since both spellings were in use at the time in the US. The term appeared in Great Britain by January 1940 as "phoney", the only acceptable spelling there.

The "Phoney War" was also referred to as the "Twilight War" and the Sitzkrieg or "sitting war", a word play on blitzkrieg. The French referred to it as the drôle de guerre, the "funny" or "strange" war. The Polish also referred to it as the Dziwna Wojna or "strange war".

A notable event during the Phoney War was the Winter War, which started with the Soviet Union's assault on Finland on November 30, 1939. Public opinion, particularly in France and Britain, found it easy to side with Finland, and demanded from their governments some effective action in support of "the brave Finns" against their much larger Soviet aggressor. This was particularly so since the Finns' defense seemed so much more successful than that of the Poles during their September Campaign.

Because of its attack on Finland, the Soviets were expelled from the League of Nations, and a proposed Franco-British expedition to northern Scandinavia was much debated. British forces began to assemble but were not dispatched before the Winter War ended. On March 20, after the Winter War, Édouard Daladier resigned as Prime Minister of France, because of his failure to aid in Finland's defense.

Allied discussions about a Scandinavian campaign caused concern in Germany and resulted in the German invasion of Denmark and Norway. Fighting continued until June when the Allies evacuated, ceding Norway to Germany.

At the Maginot Line, British and French troops were facing the Germans, but there were only minor skirmishes. In the air, there was an occasional dogfight and the Royal Air Force was dropping propaganda leaflets. Western Europe was under an uneasy calm for seven months.

Many of the British Expeditionary Force (BEF) had spent the Phoney War digging field defenses on the French–Belgian border. The French stayed behind their respective defensive Maginot Line for the duration of the "Phoney War".

Then on May 10, 1940, the Battle of France began just eight months after Britain and France had declared war on Germany, and Britain had invaded the Continent. German troops marched into Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, and this marked the end of the "Phoney War." Then by invading France from the Low Countries in the north, the Germans completely bypassed the famous Maginot Line.

Regardless of the French having a decisive numerical advantage along their border with Germany, the Anglo-French Supreme War Council made the decision to halt all offensive actions immediately. The French had instead opted to fight a defensive war, to force the Germans to come to them, which of course they did!

After the war, at the Nuremberg Trials, German military commander Alfred Jodl testified that during the Polish campaign, the 110 French, and supporting British divisions in the West were completely inactive against the 23 German divisions. General Westphal stated if the French had attacked in force in September 1939, the German army could only have held out for one or two weeks.

Instead, a rapid German advance across the Meuse River encircled the British and French forces, resulting in the Dunkirk evacuations, leaving French forces in the south unable to mount any effective resistance to the German occupation of France.

The French opted for an Armistice leaving the British invasion in a terrible defeat. The British would not have been in this pincer if they had just used some judgment. They would have had years to build a defense that would have surely countered any future designs Hitler may have had on England. Moreover, it had always been Hitler's hope for an Anglo-German alliance for the greater anti-Communist benefit of Europe.

It was clear on which front Hitler had defensive and offensive plans. It could have saved Churchill from the anguish he expressed after Dunkirk. In a speech to the House of Commons, when he called the invasion attempt "a colossal military disaster", saying "the whole root and core and brain of the British Army" had been stranded at Dunkirk and seemed about to perish, or be captured. He then went on with his "we shall fight on the beaches" speech on June 4, hailing the rescue as a "miracle of deliverance".

This was the second of three major speeches. On May 13, Churchill had emphasized "Blood, toil, tears, and sweat" and then on June 18, he recognized "This was their finest hour"! Churchill was going to great lengths to excuse his military disaster, with a dramatic campaign to continue whipping up a British fear of a possible cross channel Nazi invasion. His goal was "victory, however long and hard the road may be".

I still find it significant by May 21, 1940, that the BEF and three French armies trapped along the northern French coast could have been annihilated. However, on May 22 Hitler issued a halt order that allowed them to escape. To me this was just another clear signal that even though Britain and France had declared war on Germany; and each side had been engaged in air, land and sea operations, the highest levels in Germany were still trying for a peace with Britain!

5. 1940 French Armistice

Following the decisive Battle of France, and the German victory on June 21, 1940, Hitler received word from the French government that they wished to negotiate an armistice.

In the "Phoney War", and the German assault, the Wehrmacht had lost 27,000 killed, 111,000 wounded and 18,000 missing. French losses were 92,000 killed and more than 200,000 wounded. The British Expeditionary Force also suffered 68,000 casualties, with around 10,000 killed.

Hitler then deliberately chose the Compiègne Forest location as a supreme moment of revenge over France. Recall, the site had been the location of the 1918 Armistice and Germany's surrender.

The Germans removed the Ferdinand Fochs Railway Car from a French museum and placed it on the precise spot where it had been located in 1918. William Shirer was present, and said of Hitler, "I am but fifty yards from him. I have seen that face many times at the great moments of his life. But today! It is afire with scorn, anger, hate, revenge, triumph."

They signed the Armistice precisely at 6:36 PM on June 22, 1940, and it was effective at midnight on June 25, establishing a German occupation zone in Northern and Western France.

Hitler sat in the same chair Marshal Ferdinand Foch had in 1918, when he faced those of the defeated German Empire. After listening to the preamble, in a gesture of disdain for the French, Hitler left the carriage, as Foch had in 1918, leaving any negotiations to General Wilhelm Keitel.

On Hitler's orders, the Germans then obliterated the site and demolished the monument, which depicted a German Eagle impaled by a sword. Hitler intentionally left the Stature of Marshal Foch honoring over nothing but a wasteland. The Germans took the railway carriage to Berlin, and exhibited it as a trophy, along with a large stone tablet with the inscription:

HERE ON THE ELEVENTH OF NOVEMBER 1918 SUCCUMBED THE CRIMINAL PRIDE OF THE GERMAN REICH. VANQUISHED BY THE FREE PEOPLES WHICH IT TRIED TO ENSLAVE.

Hitler had a number of reasons for agreeing to an Armistice, principally the coming invasion of Russia. He wanted to secure his Western Front and ensure France did not continue fighting. They took the French Navy out of the war; and denied France's overseas territories to the British under a neutral French state. Leaving the French government in place would also relieve Germany of the burden of administering France and its territories, as Hitler turned his attentions towards the hope of solving continued British aggression.

According to William Shirer's The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich, French General Huntziger complained the armistice was harsher than was imposed on Germany in 1918. It provided German occupation north and west of a line through Geneva and Tours, extending to the Spanish border. This gave Germany's Kriegsmarine access to all French Channel and Atlantic ports.

The Armistice allowed a minimal French Army, the French Navy was disarmed but not surrendered, and the Germans did not mandate the turnover of French aircraft. The French based in Vichy were also free to govern the unoccupied region in the south.

Both the French and Germans thought the occupation would be provisional and last only until Britain came to terms, which they believed to be imminent. However, with Churchill's recalcitrance this did not occur, forcing nearly one million French POWs to spend the next five years in prisoner of war camps. The Germans only released a third of the initial 1.5 million prisoners to Service du Travail Obligatoire, a forced labor program administered by the Germans. There was no final peace treaty, and Germany and its Italian ally later took the unoccupied zone in 1942.

When the French military had refused to advance on Germany, and the German Blitzkrieg ended the "Phoney War", the Germans occupied virtually all of France within two weeks. The French government capitulated, and then besting their June Armistice, they went even further in July. The vote was 569 to 80 to abandon the Third Republic. France had essentially become a German puppet State.

The Franco-German armistice also required the French to turn over any German nationals on French territory. Keitel gave verbal assurances this would only apply to those refugees who had "fermented the war", a euphemism for Jews, and especially German Jews who until then had enjoyed asylum in France.

The humiliated French looked for a scapegoat and blamed the Communists and Jews, sparking a violent new wave in France's history of anti-Semitism. France essentially became a police state, and a willing partner in arresting and incarcerating foreign Jews into concentration camps. The Vichy regime ultimately deported more than 75,000 Jews to German Death camps, including an estimated 4,000 children.

So much for the ally Churchill had bet would stand with him to liberate the European Continent and save the Polish from German aggression! This is just another example of Churchill's complete lack of understanding and judgment!

By July 3, Churchill was fearful the French fleet would fall into the hands of the Germans. The British had the fleet surrounded at the port of Mers-el-Kebir outside Oran, Algeria. Churchill's message was clear, sail at once to Britain, to the USA, or scuttle your fleet. The British then intercepted a Vichy Government message that provoked Churchill to order an attack. In less than ten minutes, the British sank three French battleships killing 1,297. One battleship and five destroyers were able to escape.

6. 1942 - 1944 North Africa to Italy

By 1940, German success in Poland, France, and Norway caused Italian Dictator Benito Mussolini to be concerned Italy would lose its share of the spoils. Therefore, on June 10, 1940, Italy declared war on Britain and France. Mussolini was sure they would soon surrender. Although the French did, both Hitler and Mussolini underestimated the tenacity and commitment of the British!

It was Mussolini's intent to occupy the French and British colonies in Africa and seize control of the Suez Canal. In August 1940, he attacked the British in East Africa and Egypt with troops from his Italian colony of Ethiopia.

Simultaneously, Italian troops moved westward from Ethiopia into Sudan and seized the upper Nile Valley, where they captured Kassala, Gallabat, and Moyale, in the northern British colony of Kenya.

Mussolini refused assistance from Hitler, convinced his forces could vanquish the British. On September 13, 1940, Marshal Rodolfo Graziani began his advance into Egypt, hoping to make a seizure of the Suez Canal.

In December 1940, a devastating British offensive led to a series of severe reversals for the Italian high command who requested German assistance. By mid-February 1941, the German support had not arrived, and the Italian forces surrendered, and 115,000 were taken prisoner.

With this Italian defeat, Hitler decided to send a German Army to Libya. The intervention was code-named Operation Sunflower and included the 5th Light and 15th Panzer Divisions. They began arriving in Tripoli on February 14, 1941, and formed the Deutsches Afrika Korps under the command of General Erwin Rommel, the later famed "Desert Fox".

In March 1941, Rommel attacked the Allies in Libya, and they retreated to Egypt and only Tobruk stood against the advancing Germans. Tobruk ultimately held and Rommel was in retreat.

Rommel's skill was fighting with a bare minimum. However, the German Army was now on three fronts -- France, Russia, and North Africa, with two thirds of their forces in Russia. Entire campaigns were now short of equipment and most importantly oil!

However, in June 1942, Tobruk ultimately fell and 35,000 Allied troops were prisoners. However, at the first battle of El Alamein, Rommel faltered from a lack of supplies and fuel.

Bernard Montgomery, known as "Monty", was elevated to command of the Eighth Army, known as the "Desert Rats". He consolidated his forces, and by October 1942, the British had 230,000 men and 1400 tanks. Rommel was severely outnumbered with only five hundred tanks. The Battle of El Alamein started on October 23, 1942, and Rommel was in retreat.

After the crushing Continental defeat of the BEF, and its ignominious retreat across the English Channel, Churchill needed a victory, to prove to the British people they could fight, and could win!

The objectives of the North African Campaign were to achieve Churchill's moral objective; relieve some pressure on the Russians; enlist the French colonial empire in Morocco, Algeria, and Tunisia as allies; protect the Suez Canal; open the Mediterranean to Allied shipping; and to prepare the way for further operations against the European Axis, what Churchill called the "soft underbelly of Europe".

On November 8, 1942, Combined American and British forces commenced the invasion of French North Africa under Operation Torch. Landings on the Atlantic coast of Morocco, and the Mediterranean coast of Algeria, where initially met with resistance from the colonial forces of Vichy France.

The lack of sustained resistance by the Vichy invalidated the German rationale for not occupying the whole of France. The Germans immediately occupied southern France and moved troops on the remaining French fleet in the port of Toulon. The French Navy scuttled their remaining ships at dock before the Germans could take them.

The objectives of Operation Torch were to not only ensure a British Victory in North Africa, but to also engage American forces in a direct fight against Nazi Germany, thus providing an interim satisfaction to Stalin that America had joined the war.

Stalin had been pleading with FDR for an American second front to relieve pressure on the Red Army. The campaign did cause Germany to divert forces to North Africa. American and British trapped the "Desert Fox" on two fronts. Hitler denied evacuation, but fled Rommel out, ultimately leaving 130,000 German POW's.

The Allied campaign had lasted nearly 3 years, from June of 1940 until May of 1943, with major battles across Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Libya and Egypt; and two months later the invasion of Sicily, the springboard for invading the Italian mainland, and from there Germany.

This had been a long and bitter chapter of WWII, from Morocco to Rome, and on to the northern Italian Po Valley. General Mark W. Clark wrote the entire story of this long and successful Campaign in his War Memoirs titled Calculated Risk.

At the end of the War in Europe, General Clark was to say, "It was not surprising, perhaps, that we celebrated a victory when in reality we had not won the war. We had stopped too soon. We had been too eager to go home. We welcomed the peace, but after more years of effort and expenditure we found that we had won no peace...having seen the Red Army and Russian Diplomacy in action, my own belief is that there is nothing the Soviets would not do to achieve world domination."

7. 1941 Rudolf Hess Peace Mission

Back to the European Continent and later the main German/Soviet battle launched on June 22, 1941, Operation Barbarossa. This was surely the reason for the famous Peace Mission attempted by Rudolf Hess on May 10, 1941. However, it was clear Churchill did not want peace; his mission was to continue the war Britain had declared and to de-house and murder as many German civilians as he could.

Germany's final peace attempt with Britain seems to have been the Night Flight to Dungavel, the amazing story of Rudolf Hess's flight from Munich Germany to Dungavel Scotland. Whether Hitler sanctioned the trip is academic. The crucial point is Hess was on a peace mission! To this day, the British government has never released important documents recovered from Hess, which could substantiate this one way or another.

Hess departed on May 10, 1941, carrying a proposal that Germany would negotiate a truce with England, withdraw all forces from the West, including France, and ask only a quid pro quo, which would allow Germany a free hand in the East. Germany was about to launch their main war, the invasion of the Soviet Union to the east. If Hess could succeed, this would end the threat of Germany facing a western front, especially with the anticipation this would bring America into the war!

Hess was no fool! It is seriously doubtful he made this dangerous flight to Scotland, with the outside hope he could meet with an old aviation acquaintance he met in Berlin, at a Grand Ceremony for the opening of the 1936 Olympic Games. It is also academic to debate whether Hess was merely an idealist on a mission for humanity, or was, in fact, Hitler's Plenipotentiary! Both Hess and Hitler denied he was -- Hess to protect and honor his word to the Führer, his leader and guide; and prior to Barbarossa Hitler needed to mask any weakness a desire to demilitarize his Western Front might project.

Only pilots can relate to the courage Hess demonstrated with his solo flight of a twin-engine fighter aircraft from Munich Germany to Dungavel Scotland! Not only was Europe a war zone, but his plan would require a night instrument flight across the North Sea, and the need to find an airfield, which for some reason the British never lighted for him!

Complicating matters, Hess had gotten ahead of schedule and did not want to begin his entry into British airspace until dusk. To delay he flew several reciprocal flight paths over the North Sea. Had he not used this fuel, he may later have had enough to locate his landing spot, even in the approaching darkness.

As it was, he ran out of fuel in the designated general area and had to bail out leaving the Me Bf110 to crash, creating a more conspicuous arrival than any had intended. The British recovery team later found most of the formal Brief he was carrying in a satchel nearby the crash scene. The British have never released the contents, but we know from Hess the plan was a negotiated peace treaty with England and a commitment to withdraw all German forces from the West.

This peace proposal would have allowed Hitler to focus his resources to the East and the destruction of the Soviet Union and the threat of Bolshevism on the Continent! There is manifold convincing proof the Hess flight was expected! Not only was there a sizable and receptive Peace Party in Britain, but in all the countries of Northern Europe, as well as in neutral Spain and Switzerland!

Churchill imprisoned Hess in England until his later life sentence at the Nuremberg trials. This was his fate even though it is hard to be a war criminal from a British jail.

The Russians hated him for the plan he had carried to Churchill and blocked his release to the end; and the British never wanted it discussed that peace may have been an option. Even if Hitler had not honored the agreement, the British would have had years to build their forces, while Hitler moved to the east.

A retired Marine Colonel, and good friend has also suggested, the "Evil twins" -- Hitler and Stalin -- may have exhausted themselves fighting to a draw, rendering themselves no further threat to the Continent or England!

Churchill refused to entertain Hess' mission and proposal. There was no way he could let all the factions know of a peace offering. Further, Churchill would surely have lost any American support if he had entertained an agreement that would have unleashed the Germans on the Soviets!

Churchill had to keep Hess under control and never let his documents see the light of day. A German peace treaty with Britain and a withdrawal of all German forces from the west, to allow the Germans to focus on the Soviet Union would have been very popular in Western Europe! However, I am sure the message from Roosevelt was a strong one, including the loss of Lend Lease or any future direct military assistance from America if Britain negotiated any treaty with Germany to the detriment of the Soviets.

RAF Wing Commander, the Duke of Hamilton, was coordinating Hess's reception, and had been involved in a number of meetings both on the Continent and in Britain. There was good reason for Hess to trust the plan. Not only this, but a number of "Stand down" orders allowed his flight to pass through the British IFF monitors, a clear sign many at high levels were involved and hoped something good would come of all that had been arranged.

The plan was to be Hess's introduction to high-level persons who did not agree with Churchill, including Lloyd George, and Sir Samuel Hoar who had been in contact with the King of Sweden, and others on the Continent, regarding the mission.

Sadly, instead of landing the crash blew the cover off the entire operation. The duke never met Hess, and I am sure he was under orders from Churchill not to!

Yes, Hess was Deputy Fuehrer of the Third Reich! However, it was a sad tale to read the story of his arrest, being left to "twist in the wind" for years in a British prison, and then spending the rest of his life in the German Spandau Prison. The man was on a mission of peace. If successful, he might have saved millions and averted the virtual destruction of the Continent!

However, neither Churchill nor FDR wanted a German peace. Churchill was obsessed with his long-standing German animus, while FDR would never have agreed to unleash Hitler on the Soviets. Complicit or not, Roosevelt had presided over and allowed a government infiltrated by policy manipulating KGB agents, spies, and fellow travelers all willing to help steer the protection of Soviet Communism.

Additionally, Churchill had always seen Germany as a threat to any British European hegemony and in amazing Scotoma could not recognize the danger of a future Communist hegemony on the Continent. Actually, Churchill had gotten himself in the middle. He could not entertain any peace proposal that would give the Germans carte blanche on the Soviets and retain American support for the war Britain had declared!

The German proposal was anathema to the Soviets who never relented in their hatred of Hess. They continued to block his release until his death at 93 on August 17, 1987. He had been in the German Spandau prison ever since his life sentence at the Nuremberg Trials in October 1946. He was the last prisoner; all the others had died or gotten early release.

Hess was an alleged suicide, however, there was significant evidence he was actually murdered. As late as 2013, Scotland Yard still had the names of two British agents who had allegedly murdered Hess. The Crown Prosecution Service had information of the crime as far back as 1989, when reports suggested the British Government had ordered the assassination amid suggestions of his pending release. Hess would then have been free to expose secrets concerning the plot to overthrow the Churchill government. Within six months, the Director of Public Prosecutions said no further inquiries were necessary and closed the investigation.

Only on March 5, 1946 did Churchill finally accept reality with the delivery of his Famous Iron Curtain Speech, at a tiny rural college in Fulton, Missouri. Accompanied by Truman, he openly recognized the Soviet Union had always been the West's real mortal enemy. Churchill is also alleged to have uttered the telling phrase "We killed the wrong pig", meaning Hitler instead of Stalin. To me the whole speech was a shameless, transparent move to distance himself from his blunders and suggest he had only been following United States pressure to defeat Germany. We are still living with the result to this day!

So, I ask again: what would have happened if England had not declared war on Germany in 1939? Even if Hitler had later turned on them, the British would have had four or five years to build their forces. In the meantime, the Germans could have defeated the communists or it would have ended in a stalemate leaving them both too exhausted to threaten the West.

It is now academic, except we could still learn from Britain's disaster and protect and insulate ourselves from continuing to bungle success as GW Bush did after a victory in Iraq; or as Obama purposely did in Egypt, Libya and Syria.

One can only imagine what our world might be today if things had gone differently in Europe. Hitler's greatest blunder was his psychopathic hatred of the Jews beginning with his Kristallnacht vendetta on November 9 & 10, 1938!

The not insignificant peace party in Britain would have had a much better chance of getting Hitler's and Hess's peace proposals accepted if the specter of massive genocide had not hung over any appreciation of a negotiated peace rather than war!

Churchill got himself in the middle of all this and the world has never been the same. We can only hope the recent challenge by the distinguished British historian, Peter Padfield, will finally open the Hess files and allow the world to know the truth!

"The facts and deductions presented in this book constitute a significant challenge to the received explanation of what happened in May 1941...when history failed to turn in the way Hess and Hitler and so many in the highest circles of British life wished. It is high time the official story is confronted, for consideration of the path Churchill did not take in 1941 casts a more brilliant light on the morality of the path he did take, the history we know. Hence the sub-title of this book: The Real Turning Point of the Second World War."

8. 1941 Operation Barbarossa

On June 22, 1941, Hitler launched "Operation Barbarossa" his campaign to conquer Russia and end Stalin's plan for the Bolshevization of Europe. As Hitler had surmised, and Viktor Suvorov so convincingly points out in The Chief Culprit, the Soviets had been planning their attack on Germany for late June of 1941. Had Hitler not gone on the offense he would not have been able to stave off the offensive the Soviets had been building! Barbarossa was not a mistake; it was mandatory if Germany had any chance of survival!

The Soviets stalled the German advance in the winter of 1941, but fearing the anti-communist allegiance of the German and Japanese Axis, the Soviets needed to make certain there would be no second front in their East. The NKVD implemented "Operation Snow", the plan to ensure war between the United States and Japan, which would allow the Soviets to keep a minimum defense contingent on the Manchurian border.

Therefore, the major objective of the KGB agents inside our government had been to draw the Japanese away from any action on the Soviet Eastern front. This would enable the Soviets to focus on their Western front and the defense of Stalingrad and Moscow. Had it not been for America's massive Lend Lease supplies, and this relief on their Eastern front, the Germans would certainly have defeated the Soviets in the spring of 1942.

In the fall of 1941, Richard Sorge, a Russian spy in Japan, informed the Soviets that the Japanese war plan was to go south, and they would be taking out the American fleet on their flank as a part of that operation. Stalin would be able to move divisions to his Western front as soon as he was sure of these Japanese plans. Manifold input from his agents in Washington confirmed this intelligence.

After a long and ruthless torture, the Japanese executed Sorge. He confessed he had informed the Russians of the Japanese war plans. Did you get that? The Soviets, our so-called ally, did not warn us! The Soviets needed this American war with Japan and would not have done anything to stop it.

In a side story, the Uritsky, a Soviet freighter loaded with Lend Lease supplies was sailing from San Francisco to Vladivostok. The Soviets realized, by the course and speed of their ship, that it was going to pass in direct proximity to the advancing Japanese Kido Butai in the North Pacific. They apparently contacted the Captain of the Uritsky and ordered radio silence!

The Russians did not want any communications traffic that could have alerted our Hawaiian command. Of course, our leaders in Washington did not warn our Hawaiian commanders either! Little did the Russians know Washington already knew what was under way! Did you get this, too? There will be a lot more on this later!

As we know, the Soviets would prevail. All thanks to our massive Lend Lease and military support, while KGB agents at the very highest levels of our Washington Government fulfilled the long running plan to maneuver Japan into attacking America. Stalin's fear of a two-front war with Germany and Japan ended on December 7, 1941, and America was now in a Pacific War!

9. 1939 - 1945 WWII in Europe

As in Washington DC, Communists also infested the British government, who were providing their Enigma machine Ultra code decrypts to the Soviets. It was later learned even Churchill had provided Stalin information gleaned from Ultra because he feared Germany might win on the Eastern Front.

Arnold Deutsch was head of recruitment for NKVD agents in England, and his network included Kim Philby, Donald Maclean, Anthony Blunt and Guy Burgess. Kim Philby rose through the British ranks of MI6, and was head of its anti-Soviet department, all the while passing classified documents to his contacts in the Soviet KGB.

It seems John Cairncross was the fifth member of the Cambridge 5. A British intelligence officer, and Soviet double agent, Cairncross was instrumental in passing decrypts to the Soviets that influenced the Battle of Kursk, potentially a more pivotal battle than Stalingrad, Moscow or Leningrad. The Russian commanders were able to create a depth of defense on the path of the advancing German Armored units and the largest tank battle in history was lost before it started.

Equally heinous was Alger Hiss in America who, among other things, later steered the disaster at Yalta and drafted the UN Charter, still the most anti-American organization in the world.

Just as we excoriate those ruthless Japs, it is interesting to check out the militarism of those ruthless Germans, too! In the century from 1815 to 1914 Britain had fought ten wars, the Germans only three. In fact, from 1871 to 1914 the Germans had not been engaged in a single war, while Britain, Russia, Italy, Turkey, Japan, Spain and the United States had all been involved in wars!

Germany had not attacked Britain and Hitler had actually hoped for an Anglo-Saxon alliance to defeat Bolshevism on the Continent.

At the start, sources suggest Britain had only 13 divisions and the Germans had 100. Never mind England is an island from which America and its allies could not mount an attack until 1944. "Winnie" was full on in 1939.

By May 10, 1940, the British and French beached at Dunkirk needed a military and civilian flotilla to evacuate them. By June France had surrendered and become a client state of Germany under a Vichy government led by Marshal Pétain.

The British Expeditionary force had only escaped back across the channel because Hitler allowed it as he still hoped for peace and an alliance. However, Churchill had trapped himself in a war. The future of England was now solely dependent on an America that Churchill would only later learn was more intent on saving the Soviet Union than Britain!

Hitler was NOT a good person, but he was no threat to the world. He was, however, a giant threat to Communist Russia (USSR) and Bolshevism in Europe. His entire project outlined long before in Mein Kampf was lebensraum, Drang nach Osten, and the destruction of Bolshevism! There is a giant difference between National Socialism and International Communism. The Nazis had no comparable Comintern, the worldwide Communist International organization!

Hitler was also a rotten son of a bitch, and I am no apologist for his psychopathic hatred of Jews, who in large part had created and fostered a wider intellectual European culture. My greatest intellectual heroes in philosophy, music and psychology were Jews. I understand Hitler's revenge on the elite bankers who raped Germany after WWI; but murdering middle class, and poor everyday working Jews was simply an unforgivable genocide.

There had been plans of a less lethal end than what became the "Final Solution". However, the evolving two-front war disrupted any chance for the Palestine and/or Madagascar settlement, rather than a hideous extermination.

One can only wonder what might have been the real spark of Hitler's hatred. Some have suggested a projection on to others, of his self-hatred of a personal Jewish ancestry. His animus was beyond the Jewish banking cartel and racism. His condition was clearly pathological idée fixe, and not only a sad end for millions of Jews but for millions of Germans as well.

Hitler's vendetta on Jews was his greatest mistake! His internal war on Jews also insured Germany was fighting a civil war in the midst of WWII. A humanitarian disaster, and a political one, too, in that it most likely blocked the road to any rational discussion of peace in the West, all to the benefit of the Communists in the East!

Hitler hated Communists and from the beginning, the Nazis were in street battles with them. The Japanese also hated Communists, and their defensive perimeter in Manchuria was their defense against Soviet Communism!

Chamberlain honored Britain's war guarantee to Poland. A splendid idea declared the again soon to be appointed First Lord, on his own way to Prime Minister. The September 3, 1939 declaration of war on Germany was an unnecessary brazen act that would ensure Britain would never recover her once dominant position in the world.

Hitler had desperately wanted to avoid war with England. His aim was East and the recovery of annexed German territory and the destruction of Soviet Bolshevism! A war in the west was the last thing he wanted, as he knew this could also bring America into another Continental war. Hitler wanted peace with England!

One of the most, if not the most important book on the European War, is Richard Overy's classic The Bombing War 1939 - 45. This work, by a distinguished British historian, makes it clear what Churchill's recalcitrance precipitated, while also covering the entire history of the conflict. Richard Evans of the Guardian said it "was probably the most important book published on the history of the Second World War"!

The principal territory dispute for Germany was the Danzig corridor, which, thanks to Versailles, had put a million East Prussian Germans under Polish Control. The Czechs had also been ruthless in taking what they wanted in their lust for land. In total, there were more than five million Germans left under Polish and Czechoslovakian control and Hitler wanted them liberated.

Considered one of the terrible historic blunders of Versailles, Hitler had tried for an extended period to resolve the Polish issue peacefully. He had even offered a German/Polish alliance but Colonel Beck, the Polish Foreign Minister, was obdurate in his refusal to cooperate! The Poles would later reap the whirlwind this had sown!

On August 23, 1939, Hitler and Stalin achieved a pact, signed by Ribbentrop and Molotov; and the military partition of Poland followed on September 1, 1939. Stalin had also been secretly helping Hitler rearm with the hope Germany would later be bogged down in the West, making an easier course for the planned Soviet attack, and the Bolshevization of Europe!

Meanwhile, Hitler had been working on peace proposals with England, with the hope of eliminating the possibility of a two-front war, even with the dream of England as an ally. Hitler envisioned Britain ruling the seas and their Colonial Empire, while Germany would control the Continent, principally to the East with the defeat of the Soviet Union.

The Siegfried Line was a WWI German line of defense along the northern French border. In 1936, plans to augment line were completed and construction was finished between 1938 and 1940. The line included 18,000 bunkers, tunnels and tank traps, and stretched more than 390 miles from the Netherlands to Switzerland. With this massive defensive project, one can surely question if this signaled any plan for an offensive war against England.

France had also built their Maginot Line in the 1930s to deter a German invasion. It, too, consisted of a line of concrete fortifications, obstacles, and weapons installations, along France's borders with Italy, Switzerland, Germany, and Luxembourg; however, it did not extend to the English Channel ultimately allowing a WWII German invasion from the north!

Yes, the ultimate invasion of France happened for two reasons: to settle the score of Versailles, but more importantly to neutralize any French threat on the German Western Front, prior to the planned June 22, 1941 launch of Operation Barbarossa, when 3 million German troops would invade Russia.

During the "Phoney War", the British Expeditionary Force (BEF) had been on the Continent in League with France and their joint declarations of war on Germany. While in the background, Hitler was still hoping to persuade Britain to agree on peace. German pilots that attacked Scottish naval bases later said they would have been court martialled and executed for bombing civilians.

The British and the French had declared war, but neither Western power committed to launching a significant offensive, to offer any real support of the Anglo-Polish and Franco-Polish military alliances. At best, it was just a second front to help the Polish in their battle with Germany and Germany's temporary Soviet ally. There was surely no way for the French or the British to fight their way into the Polish German war!

French General Maurice Gamelin ordered his troops not to approach any closer than 1 km (0.62 miles) from the German positions along the Siegfried Line; in fact, he ordered them to withdraw to their Maginot Line barracks.

The following day, the commander of the French Military Mission to Poland, General Louis Faury, informed the Polish Chief of Staff, General Wacław Stachiewicz, that the planned allied September 17–20, 1939 offensive had been postponed.

With their joint declarations of war on Germany, the British had relied on the French as a committed ally. They seemingly had no knowledge that France was already a Nation so split along political lines that they would be of no help in a ground war in Europe.

The West should have allowed the German/Russian war to run its course in Eastern Europe. Only those blind to the evil of Stalin could argue his was a better choice than was Hitler.

America is still brainwashed on this point! Just mention Hitler or Stalin and see the radically different responses you get. Hitler was a National Socialist. Stalin was an International Communist, with an organized Comintern operating worldwide -- and in the very halls of our own White House!

So again, what if Churchill had not led a declaration of war on Germany because of the German invasion of Poland. Let us further assume Britain would have acquiesced to Germany's later invasion of the Soviet Union. Hitler had always hoped this would be the case, especially since Churchill was surely an anti-communist.

Any idea of a later successful German invasion of England fails to recognize the Royal Navy and the RAF would then have had years to increase their military and would have been capable of slaughtering any invasion fleet attempting to cross the English Channel in Rhine River Barges. Further, the idea that German Airborne divisions could have accomplished a victory with no heavy armor and artillery is just pure folly. It would not have been possible!

There would have been no massive RAF bomber offensive destroying German cities, and production. The Luftwaffe would have been a tactical force in support of ground operations in the East, instead of a defensive force against British and later American Bomber Commands.

There would have been a diminished need for massive quantities of German AAA munitions, as the Soviets had no significant Bomber force. While instead, tens of thousands of German 88mm guns would have been on the Eastern Front aimed at the Soviets, not at RAF bombers!

Even the United States was not in a position to offer Stalin a continental second front until 1944. With no threat of invasion on the Western Front, scores of German divisions could have been on their Eastern Front! By 1944, the Soviets would have been defeated; and Hitler would have been busy occupying the vast expanses of the Soviet Union, Not invading England!

However, Churchill now found himself the principal warrior on Germany's Western Front. He was encouraged to hang in there; the Yanks would be coming with a main second front, along with the one already opened in North Africa.

The so-called Second or main Front was FDR's promise to "Uncle Joe" Stalin after his brief alliance with Hitler. When it came, D-Day would actually be the Fourth Front! The First had been the massive military and civilian Lend Lease aid to the Soviets, which far surpassed the aid we gave to Britain! The Second had been North Africa; and the Third had been our engineered war with Japan to protect the Soviet's eastern flank from a two-front war!

There is no question Churchill had courage, was a great orator, and incomparable writer. He had embellished his military image with his famous armored train story in the Boer War. However, he had also exhibited reckless daring and dismal judgment. General Redvers Buller, the commander in South Africa, described Churchill's actions as "inconceivable stupidity".

Questions of his judgment continued to reveal a broad consensus that he was no Statesman. Make no mistake; Britain turned both European wars into world wars! Churchill was there both times, with a combination of German animus and his desire for British Continental hegemony!

By 1944, Churchill had advocated unleashing both chemical and biological weapons against Germany. His chemical idea was to drench the cities of the Ruhr with poison gas, requiring most of the population to be in constant need of medical attention.

On the biological side, one of Churchill's earlier plans had been "Operation Vegetation". His idea was to drop five million anthrax cakes in German pastures to poison the beef and dairy herds, and in turn the civilian population. They tested the cakes on Gruinard Island in Scotland and the contamination persisted there until 1990. Apparently, Churchill never got Roosevelt's approval for these grotesque plans!

Regardless of any threat of Bolshevism, Churchill had seen Russia as a way to counter German expansionism. Despite their brief period of alliance with Hitler, Churchill was in support of the Soviets, even to declaring war on heroic little Finland he had earlier praised for resisting Stalin's aggression!

For any who come up with the argument that Hitler was a threat to America, let me remind you, Göring's Luftwaffe could not achieve victory across a Channel; so how was he going to launch an air attack across the Atlantic Ocean? Moreover, if Hitler could not invade England in 1940, how was he going to invade the American continent with virtually no surface ships against the power of the American and British Fleets?

Throughout WWII, the U.S. Navy did not encounter a single German surface war ship. The idea of an American threat is preposterous and was only an excuse for America to enter another European war. Another rally for "Over There, Over there", but this time the objective was to save the Soviets...to save communism!

The worst monster on the Continent was not Hitler, but none other than good old "Uncle Joe" Stalin. While we supported him all through the 1930's and 1940's, he killed around 60 million of his own people. The overall death toll of communism is more than 100 million. However, considering Mao and later Pol Pot, it more likely approaches 200 million!

Moreover, the United States of America did not win WWII, the Soviet Union did! We made sure of that! In addition, Germany did not start WWII, England did! Germany did not want a war in the West; the goal was an Empire in the East, principally at a loss to the Soviets.

Soviet Russia would never have survived a two-front war with Germany and Japan -- and everything America did in WWII made sure that would not happen!

10. Major Conferences 1941- 1945

In all there were approximately twenty-three major conferences regarding the European war. Churchill attended 16, Roosevelt 12 and Stalin 7. Incapacitated and ultimately dying, one does have to admire Roosevelt's ocean voyages and flights all over the world, while Stalin never went further from Russia than Tehran, Iran.

In the 1940's Presidential air, land and sea travel were surely an ordeal. There was no "Air force One" or "Marine One" helicopter service in those days. This, and Roosevelt's failing health, leaves no question he was at a major disadvantage negotiating with Stalin, a murderous Communist Dictator!

The Tehran meeting was in late November to early December 1943, included Stalin, Churchill, and Roosevelt. The main topic was the final strategy of the war in Europe and setting a date for Stalin's long requested Second Front, later known as Operation Overlord.

The two most famous conferences of the war were the later ones held in Yalta and Potsdam.

Yalta Conference -- February 4 - 11, 1945, in Yalta, USSR

In attendance at this final disaster of the war in Europe were again Churchill, Roosevelt and Stalin. Churchill watched as America made sure it had all been for the benefit of the Soviets who took nearly half of Germany and all of Eastern Europe!

We even agreed to leave behind 20,000 American POWs held in German prison camps later liberated by the Soviets in Eastern Europe.

We also agreed to Operation Keelhaul, the forced repatriation of a million Russians we forced back under the point of bayonet. These included Russians that had fled from Stalin, Soviet troops that had defected to fight with Germany against the monster they hated, even Soviet troops that had become German POW's, Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn being one! Along with our American POWs, they were all sent to Gulag slave labor camps, or murdered!

Churchill and FDR also ceded a new German-Polish border to Stalin, which displaced 11 million Germans from their homes. Two million would die in a forced transfer, considered a crime against humanity of historic dimensions. Yet all we still hear is the terrible Japs at Nanjing and the misunderstood reason Hitler was bombing London!

WWII was a war between Nazism and Bolshevism. Hitler lost; Stalin won!

As General Mark Clark said at the end of the war, the Soviets won WWII! Now our best allies are Germany and Japan. Our worst enemies are the Soviets we protected and the Chinese communists our State Department traitors in Asia supported against the Nationalists.

It was a liability to be Asian anti communist. We tried to kill Chiang Kai Shek three times, Syngman Rhee in South Korea once, and only later succeeded with Ngo Dinh Diem in Vietnam! None of these men was the best pick, but in each case, the alternatives were worse!

Both Germany and Japan feared Bolshevization and the Soviet Union. If our government had not been capitulating to all the demands of the Soviets, a different outcome in both spheres may well have been possible.

With the German army poised for a final offensive, Stalin's contacts in America had made sure there would not be another attack in Siberia! All the Red army divisions that had been guarding the Nomonhan front had been withdrawn for the final defense of Moscow!

Potsdam Conference -- July 17 - August 2, 1945 near Berlin, Germany

This was the last of the Big Three meetings during World War II. In attendance were Stalin, Truman, and Churchill's successor Clement Attlee. The major issues were postwar Europe and a demand for the 'unconditional surrender' of Japan.

Other topics were the decentralization of all Nazis, the trial of war criminals, and Stalin's request that land east of the Oder and Neisse rivers be transferred from Germany to Poland, and German reparations would be capital equipment in exchange for raw materials. This fit clearly with the Morgenthau plan, of limiting Germany to strictly a post war agrarian economy.

The Pacific war got secondary treatment. Truman had received word of the successful atomic bomb test soon after he arrived at Potsdam, but only casually mentioned the "new weapon" to Stalin.

With the end of the war in Europe, Truman was quickly becoming aware the FDR/Stalin plan did not merely address Europe. The Soviets had quickly invaded Northeast China, and their move on to the Korean Peninsula required America troops to stop their advance at what to this day continues as the famous 38th Parallel. I will have a lot more to say on this in Part two, where I will reveal more details of the FDR/Stalin plan for Asia mirroring what had transpired in Eastern Europe and Germany!

11. End of the European War, VE Day May 8, 1945

After a great American and British sacrifice, the final victor of WWII in Europe was to be the United Nations, which to this day is an enemy of the free world with a charter written by the American Communist traitor Alger Hiss!

A 9AM Broadcast Delivered by President Truman from the Radio Room at the White House Announcing the Surrender of Germany May 8, 1945.

"This is a solemn but glorious hour. I only wish that Franklin D. Roosevelt had lived to witness this day. General Eisenhower informs me that the forces of Germany have surrendered to the United Nations. The flags of freedom fly over all Europe."

By late 1944 and early 1945, many Germans had also been trying to end the carnage, even Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had been forced to accept consuming poison to save his family, while the SS brutally executed Admiral Wilhelm Canaris.

In all the SS murdered nearly 5,000 top military and political prisoners on orders from Hitler, who was going completely mad in defeat.

These, and many other high-level Germans, had been actively trying to surrender to America, but not to the Soviets. Stalin's demands simply protracted the war, death and destruction! Major issues hardening those loyal to Hitler against any chance of earlier peace were:

- The complete unwillingness of the Roosevelt Administration to entertain any back-channel approaches for an early surrender to the allies
- The Morgenthau plan, devised by Harry Dexter White, for the destruction of Germany's industrial capacity and rendering it an agrarian nation
- The insistence of an unconditional surrender
- And making it clear the Russians were going to be the ones to move on Berlin.

Many, even Eisenhower, contended these factors extended the war by at least six months, a time that included the Battle of the Bulge, from December 16, 1944 to January 25, 1945, America's largest and bloodiest battle of World War II.

Moreover, Harry Dexter White was in good company with his leader, Henry Morgenthau, Jr, Secretary of the United States Treasury, whose plan was to insure Stalin's total domination of Europe. The objective to destroy all German industry and render the Nation an agrarian economy was all for the benefit of the Soviets.

By 1946, even Truman recognized the Morgenthau plan would have been a poor approach to building a viable and peaceful West Germany. Given former president Hoover's experience with Germany after World War I, Truman selected him to examine conditions, and determine a better plan for the occupied nation.

Hoover produced a series of reports critical of the pending U.S. policy, pointing out the German economy had fallen to its lowest level in a hundred years, and further stating it was an illusion a New Germany could be reduced to an agrarian state, unless we exterminated, or moved 25,000,000 people.

By April 14, 1947, Hoover also initiated a school meals program in the American and British occupation zones. The program served 3,500,000 children from age six to 18. Grateful Germans called the Hoover meals program, Hooverspeisung, ultimately providing a total of 40,000 tons of American food.

This action laid the foundation for the Marshall Plan, which gave Europe a Germany, which became the nucleus of a post war peace and economic advancement in Western Europe! Marshall got the credit for a plan actually drafted by Former Republican President Herbert Hoover!

Maybe as a reaction to this change of plans was one of the first acts of the Cold War. The Soviets initiated the Berlin Blockade, lasting from June 24, 1948 until May 12, 1949. In effect, the Soviets blocked all railway, road, and canal access to the Western controlled sectors of Berlin.

In response, the West organized the Berlin airlift from June 26, 1948 to September 30, 1949 providing necessary supplies to the people of West Berlin. This was a huge undertaking given the size of the city's population.

The allies flew over 200,000 flights, delivering up to 8,893 tons of necessities per day, such as fuel and food. The Soviets did not disrupt the airlift for fear it could lead to open conflict. However, the Berlin Blockade surely highlighted what many, including Patton, had warned of regarding the Soviets.

After the Nuremberg trials, we either shot or hanged many of the Axis mass murderers, but for the Soviets, it was not even one of their classic "show trials". The British and Russians were our allies, so all the Russians had done was accepted.

After the first firebombing of Tokyo, even Curtis LeMay was to say if we had lost the war, he would have been tried as a war criminal.

However, Russian crimes had been beyond the pale and included:

- Starving to death 10 million Ukrainians with their collective farming scheme
- Executing as many as 20 thousand Polish Officer's and NCOs in the Katyn Forest
- Killing 10 times more Soviet civilians than Hitler killed Jews, Germans or East Europeans
- Forcing the "repatriation" of more than a million Russians from Germany after the war with Operation Keelhaul
- The forced resettlement of a million German families
- In addition, not releasing the more than 20,000 American POWs liberated by the Soviets from German camps in the east.

Our American POWs went to the Gulags and died in the slave work camps as told by Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn in his famous book The Gulag Archipelago. Moreover, all of this was just the beginning of the atrocities the Soviets committed under Stalin not to mention that they grabbed all Eastern Europe and a third of Germany at Yalta.

Moreover, just as WWI had set the stage for WWII, the stage was set for the Korean War, Cold War, Vietnam War; and now in 2018 and beyond we have the Russians again!

Patton knew all of this and much more. Truman feared him coming home and blowing the whistle on a Communist Democratic administration that had sold out America, so they killed him! Truman, Ike, "Wild Bill" Donovan and their henchman Douglas Bazata facilitated this dreadful act! More than likely, the Soviets were also involved. They hated and feared Patton more than they had Hess!

Truman never had to explain the deeds of the administration he had served, and later won the 1948 election. Ike got to be President of Columbia, the most left-wing college, in the most left-wing city in America, and later was the elite pick for POTUS, just as they played the game until 2016!

Donovan never got his hoped for move from the OSS to the CIA. After the 1953 inauguration, and the beginning of the Communist Revolution in Southeast Asia, Eisenhower sent him to be US Ambassador to Thailand. He was only there a year, and by 1957, was in a nursing home and died in 1959, taking all his secrets with him. Follow the money...follow the power!

When it was all over, we had destroyed both Germany and Japan, much of Asia and most of Europe. Later MacArthur rebuilt the ally we once had; Marshall ostensibly rebuilt the potential ally we might have better used; and the Soviets built their Wall!

Then "Uncle Joe" set us on the path to a Korean War, a Cold War, and the Vietnam War, and our military leaders still see the Soviets as one of the greatest existential threats to America! If only the West had earlier had pragmatic Statesmen with a better perspective.

WWII was not a politically correct avoidance of collateral damage. We, and especially the British, killed enemy civilians en masse with the idea if we killed enough of them; they would stop fighting - 600,000 civilians in Germany alone -- men, women and children. If faced with this task again, I hope we have the capacity to protect our national survival, and a strategy to focus our retaliation on the nucleus of our enemy's military, not their civilians!

12. 1920 and 1930 Japanese History

Like it or not, the Japanese fought a violent, no holds barred war! We did, too, at places like Dresden and Hiroshima.

To understand Japan's actions in 1941, it is necessary to understand the military revolt of February 26, 1936. Later referred to as just 226, it had resulted in the murder of Cabinet members for their reluctance to take a strong stand for Japan.

The Japanese hated and feared Russia. Since 1916, the Trans Siberian railway had connected Moscow with Vladivostok, and was now expanding with branch lines into Mongolia, China, and North Korea. Not only did the Japanese have strategic concerns over Port Arthur, but also of Russian military policy, economic control, and colonization.

On the night of 8-9 February 1904, Japanese destroyers launched a surprise attack on Russian warships at Port Arthur, and on February 10, Japan declared war on Russia. The later battle of the Yellow Sea was a significant defeat for Russia, and the final Tsushima encounter resulted in the Japanese sinking the Russian fleet with thousands killed or taken prisoner.

Major land battles also took place in Korea and Manchuria, with Japanese divisions inflicting heavy casualties and driving back the much larger Russian army. A 1905 Russian offensive at San-de-pu also ended in failure. This was not a minor war; low estimates were 100,000 dead and countless wounded in the land battles alone.

Then in August 1939, the Soviet Union and Japan fought another massive battle at Khalkhin-Gol. This disputed region was along the Khalkha River, between Mongolia and Manchuria, referred to as the Nomonhan.

The Mongolian People's Republic was a Soviet ally, and the Japanese had a legendary memory of the Mongol invasion they had escaped in 1280! That was the time of the Kamikaze or "Divine Wind" when a typhoon destroyed the Chinese and Korean fleet bringing the Mongol invaders to Kyushu!

After winning a narrow victory in the Nomonhan incident, Soviet General Zhukov again considered Japan an existential threat to the Soviet Union. This is what inspired the NKVD to pursue a needed war between the United States and Japan!

By 1941, even the emperor feared for his life as a new wave of 226 emotions was pushing a rejection of American control, communism, and most specifically the Bolshevik threat from their hated enemy, on their Western flank.

Hirohito was on notice by his own people and the Army, that they would no longer support him if he did not take a strong stand against the Russians, and the economic pressure from the United States. Japan's foreign policy was not so much anti-American, as it was anti-Soviet, as thousands of dead Japanese and Russians proved at the Nomonhan.

All these moves had forced a political crisis in Japan that enabled the War Party to gain control. Long-range stratagems, to push Japan to a war footing, had been underway even before FDR took office. Now with the Soviets threatened by Germany, the traitors in America were going to complete the task, and the man of the hour was Soviet agent Harry Dexter White, Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury -- the man who gave us Pearl Harbor!

White's tale starts with Russian NKVD agents Iskhak Abdulovich Akhmerov and Vitalii Pavlov, and Pavlov's infamous meeting with White at the still extant Old Ebbitt Grill in Washington, DC. White later wrote a political, economic and financial weapon of war. Henry Morgenthau, Jr, Secretary of the Treasury, accepted it, and Dean Acheson and the Roosevelt Administration implemented it as policy.

There is no longer room for speculation or accusations of conspiracy theory. Pavlov retired as a Lieutenant General of the KGB and provided all the details regarding his mission, direct from Stalin to Akhmerov, to work with White to maneuver American foreign policy to force Japan into a war with America.

It was imperative to have Japan fully engaged with the United States to remove any threat of the Soviets having to face a war on their Eastern front with Japan, as they fought the desperate action with Germany on their Western Front!

By December 1941, the Wehrmacht was closing in on Moscow and Leningrad and British and American intelligence expected the Soviet Union to collapse in the spring of 1942. Instead, the Soviets were able to move 15 infantry divisions, 1,700 tanks and 1,500 aircraft from the Far East, all made available by the war launched between Japan and America on December 7, 1941.

The German advance stalled, but to ensure the ultimate Soviet victory in Europe, America was still destined to open a second European front, not to mention the entire Pacific War already in progress! After it was over, our Soviet "ally" gave us the Berlin airlift and the cold war, only to now again surface as a principal enemy!

Pavlov revealed it all in his 1996 book Operation Snow: Half a Century at KGB Foreign Intelligence. John Koster filled in more details in his book Operation Snow, while The Venona Secrets: The Definitive Expose of Soviet Espionage in America by Herbert Romerstein and Eric Breindel provides the complete picture and corroborates both what Pavlov and Koster had written. We fought the entire Pacific war for the benefit of the Soviet Union, our Treasury and State Departments planned it, and Roosevelt was complicit!

The Roberts Commission never looked any further. All the proof was later in the Venona decrypts and Harry Dexter White and Harry Hopkins led the list of Soviet agents in our government. Congressman Hamilton Fish was one of the first to call White a traitor.

In 1996, Vitalii Pavlov confirmed that White was his main contact, and was the man who came to the aid of the Soviet Union by his actions in giving us Pearl Harbor. The facts leave no room for debate.

We lured Japan into the December 7, 1941, Pearl Harbor attack by a series of actions by Soviet agents in our government and others sympathetic to Communist Russia. Not the least was Harry Hopkins, Roosevelt's principal advisor, who lived in the White House, and who was later recognized to have been the highest-level soviet agent in America.

Moreover, as for the 2016 Obama Memorial Weekend apology tour in Japan, what the Democrat President should have done was explain he was sorry his Communist Democratic Party of traitors had set up Japan for nearly ten years, with the end game of maneuvering them into attacking America and causing a war in the Pacific.

As for Japan, even before the atomic bombs, we had already destroyed 70 to 80% of all their major cities, and the initial firebombing of Tokyo alone had killed 100,000 civilians.

The Japanese were apparently going to fight to the death. A mainland invasion would have cost America at least a million additional casualties and the Japanese would have lost ten times that number. Okinawa had taught us what an invasion of the Japanese homeland would cost America, and many feel Truman did the right thing! However, others have pointed out the Japanese were also trying to surrender!

Our animus to Japan had been ongoing since the 1920's and included our own Pacific hegemony with a dose of racism. As a young naval officer, Admiral Layton had been deeply involved in this whole history and at least 15 years before WWII he knew by our political actions that America would ultimately be headed for a war with Japan.

One of the principal factors dividing us was the Japanese were virulent anti-communists who hated the Soviets and their Bolshevism. Japan feared another war with Russia and established a defense perimeter in Manchuria. The communists at the highest levels of our government knew of this Japanese antipathy with the Soviets and this fueled our actions over a protracted time, eventually leading to Pearl Harbor!

After WWI, our Japanese ally was mandated a number of Pacific Islands that had been under German control. The Japanese were to manage the islands and care for any indigenous peoples. By the mid 1930's, Japan began militarizing them as an eastern defense perimeter against America, with Manchuria as their Western defense line against the Soviets. All this predated any relation to Pearl Harbor, which only later resulted from the Soviet situation and what was taking place in Europe. Soviet agents in our government steered the strategy to be sure the Japanese went south, rather than into Siberia.

The pressure in Japan to protect the homeland became as intense as it had been on February 26, 1936, when those who resisted received lethal blows. By 1941, the Cabinet, and the emperor himself, knew they would be risking their lives if they did not stand their ground for Japan!

This is also a lesson that might well have applied to some better policies from our recent Communist Democrat leadership! When any Nation subordinates its homeland defense to its enemies, they risk an armed public or military response! In America, this would be a military loyal to the Constitution, not to a temporary Dictator!

When civil war broke out in China in 1931, Japan occupied Manchuria as a buffer state. This was the principal way the Europeans had collected empires. Yet, the West was "shocked" Japan would embark upon this course of "aggression." One Japanese diplomat was to say, "Just when we learn how to play poker, they change the game to bridge."

What Japan had hoped to create in China was exactly what the British had done in India; and the French had done in Indochina: exploit vast colonies. This was exactly what Japan was doing to place themselves among the world powers.

By 1937, Japan controlled China's coastal cities, but not the interior. Following their victory in Shanghai, the Japanese turned their attention towards Nanjing. With a poorly armed and trained army, Chiang Kai-shek and his nationalists had been fighting the Japanese in the central and south-west, while also fighting Chinese communists in the north-west.

The Nationalist and Communist armies each numbered in the millions. Estimates of the dead in their internal civil war alone are between 15 and 20 million, displacing as many as 90 million refugees.

This is not an excuse for the Japanese behavior, but death and destruction were rampant across China! There was no mercy or control by any, not the Nationalists, the Communists or the Japanese!

The July 7, 1937 clashes at Marco Polo Bridge near Peking precipitated a wider war in the north. Yet it seems with all that was going on in China, all we heard from those opposed to Japan was: what about the rape of Nanjing? How about what Stalin was doing?

Fearful of also losing this battle, Chiang ordered all his troops to leave Nanjing, and forbid the evacuation of civilians. Chiang never seemed to consider an armistice, but instead called for a "war of resistance to the end".

Nevertheless, the Japanese "rape of Nanjing" is the one event, familiar worldwide, where it is alleged the Imperial Japanese Army (IJA) murdered hundreds of thousands of soldiers and civilians. There are no official records, with some claiming the deaths were an exaggeration, while others deny a massacre even occurred. Seems both camps just exploit the propaganda.

In trying to stem the Japanese advance, Chiang had also ordered the dikes on the Yellow River destroyed, causing more than half a million Chinese dead and as many as 4.8 million refugees.

The reports of the Nanjing incident offer no comparison to the overall civilian deaths in China, the Pacific War, or to what our so-called ally, Stalin, had done in the Soviet Union; or for that matter, the civilians the allies would eventually murder in Europe!

There have been several theories regarding the brutal and merciless behavior exhibited by many members of the IJA towards military adversaries and civilians. It has been generally accepted their actions were most likely a projection of the brutality they had experienced in their training.

The IJA practiced extremely harsh treatment of its enlisted soldiers from their start of training, including beatings, strenuous duty tasks, lack of adequate food, and other violent or harsh disciplinary tactics.

The IJA had beaten this cruelty into their troops. Down the whole chain of command, there were public beatings to harden them. From the highest levels, the message was to BEAT aggression into your forces.

I have later come to realize another much stronger psychological affect was in play for all militarized Japanese. I do not offer this as an excuse, or to accept their brutal behavior at all the distant locations where it prevailed.

The Japanese had been told to win or die! As the war progressed it became more obvious Japan was not going to win; and to surrender, or later try to return home, would be considered cowardice, and a dishonorable loss of face. Knowing their end was to win or die, they began projecting their own death on to all others with a vengeance!

And to understand why Japan, as a nation, lashed out, we must go back to World War I, when they had been our ally. Many scholars credit the manner with which America forced the end of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, as being a leading cause for Japan's actions in World War II. Of course, the other major factor was our maneuvering them into being an enemy for the benefit of the Soviets.

The situation regarding the Anglo-Japanese Alliance occurred at the 1921 Washington Naval Conference, where the United States pressured the British to end their 20-year alliance with Japan. By appeasing the Americans, the British enraged and alienated a proud nation that had been a loyal friend and ally. Japan was now isolated with Stalin's brooding empire to the north, a rising China to their west, and a complete lack of trust in the calculating Americans to their East.

Japan needed to expand in Asia. Their population had doubled, and they required raw materials for their emerging industries. The U.S. offered to help them find raw materials if they would stop their expansionist policies.

However, after interference with their treaty agreements with Britain, Japan refused to trust or believe the U.S. was in a position to control them, especially after the forced end to the Anglo-Japanese Alliance.

The U.S. then placed embargos on even such items as scrap metal. At this point, Japan realized the U.S. was a major factor in trying to halt their quest for their Pacific Hegemony.

When competing powers are trying to influence or expand into an area, conflict is inevitable. All nations are looking out for their own best interest. That Japan attacked several of its neighbors no more makes them an evil nation than it does America warring with our various neighbors and competitors on the North American continent.

These conflicts are the natural result of any dynamic expanding power. In America, it was our "Manifest Destiny"! In Japan, they were looking out for their best interests, which included its elemental need for petroleum and other imports.

Looked at in this broader perspective, the conduct of WWII was almost entirely about territory, hegemony and petroleum. Germany and Japan both ran their military campaigns with the fundamental desire to control oil fields.

The USA was successful with its projection of power via its naval and air forces, due almost entirely to having huge domestic supplies of oil. Italy was inept in WWII largely as result of oil shortages, even lacking those supplies necessary to sortie their Mediterranean fleet.

Had this been turned around, would America have gone to war, calling it "preemptive", to access oil from Japanese or German spheres of control? That would not necessarily make America an "evil" nation and Japan/Germany "good" nations. Geographic conflicts over petroleum and many other vital commodities are still major factors in National behavior, just as they were in 1941.

13. 1941 The Pacific War

In Asia, it began in the 1920's with initial steps to control Japan even after they had been an ally during World War I. The fundamental under pinning of WWII in both Asia and Europe was to save the Soviet Union!

The early sanctions on Japan began with restrictions on the size of the Japanese fleet, later exacerbated by the United States forcing Britain to cancel their Anglo-Japanese alliance. Called an act of "breathtaking stupidity", the Japanese took this as an ethnic slur and worse, it left them alone in Asia to defend themselves against their archenemy -- The Soviets!

In January of 1964, I had written my Rutgers University English thesis on the Pearl Harbor attack; however, my conclusion from what I knew then was wrong.

My early understanding led me to believe we engineered the Pearl Harbor attack to get a reluctant America into WWII to assist Britain. Now, all these decades later, we have the Venona decrypts that prove we entered the war to save the Soviets, and the potential of World Communism!

After Japan's 1931 invasion of Northeast China, pressures on Japan continued throughout the 1930's, with ever-increasing embargos on steel and scrap metal, financial restrictions, and ultimately limits on their access to petroleum.

Japan's Manchurian moves were both economic and defensive. Fear was growing in Japan over the rising power of Mao Tse-Tung's communists, along with an expanding Soviet presence and their influence in China!

When France capitulated in June 1940, Japan moved into northern French Indochina and the United States imposed further embargos on steel and scrap metal. After Hitler invaded Russia in June 1941, Japan moved into southern Indochina, and FDR ordered all Japanese assets frozen; however, he did not cut off their oil.

On July 18, 1941, FDR acknowledged to his Cabinet that an embargo on oil would most certainly force an oil-starved Japan to seize the oil fields of the Dutch East Indies. Then in September, Dean Acheson, a State Department lawyer, drew up sanctions in such a way as to block Japanese oil purchases. Supposedly, FDR was not aware of this action and, once implemented, he felt he could not back down.

By late 1941, Japan had both a War and a Peace Party, with the latter in power. Prime Minister Konoye called in American Ambassador Joseph Grew and secretly offered to meet FDR in Juneau, AK or anywhere in the Pacific.

According to Grew, Konoye was willing to give up Indochina and China, except for the buffer region in the north, which protected their western front from Stalin. In return, the U.S. would broker a peace with China, and open up the embargoed oil "pipeline" to Japan. Konoye advised Grew that Emperor Hirohito knew of this initiative and was ready to give the order for Japan's retreat.

Fearful of a "Second Munich," America spurned the offer. Konoye fell from power and Hideki Tojo replaced him. The United States then offered a "modus vivendi"; if Japan simply withdrew from southern Indochina, the United States would partially lift the oil embargo. Chiang Kai-shek became "hysterical," and his American adviser, communist Owen Lattimore, intervened to abort the proposal.

Facing a choice between ending their empire, and fighting for its life, Japan decided to seize the oil fields in the Indies. The only forces capable of intervening were MacArthur in the Philippines and the U.S. Pacific fleet FDR had conveniently moved from San Diego to Honolulu.

After Barbarossa and into the winter of 1941, Stalin was in a panic and Operation Snow was underway. The resulting "sneak" attack on Pearl Harbor would guarantee Japan would be in a War with America, and not expanding on the Soviet eastern front!

Then on December 8, 1941, MacArthur's "Pearl Harbor" occurred just ten hours after the Hawaiian attack! The loss of five old battle ships in Hawaii had no material impact on the course of the Pacific war! The carriers were at sea, and later at Midway, Nimitz proved America had not received a mortal blow.

In strategic terms, the attack on the Philippines was a far greater Japanese triumph than Pearl Harbor. However, MacArthur was not held accountable, as were Admiral Kimmel and General Short in Hawaii!

It should have raised questions as to why MacArthur suffered the same fate ten hours after the attack on Pearl Harbor, yet he was not relieved of command and instead was elevated to the same level as Admiral Nimitz.

Roosevelt had recalled MacArthur to active duty in the Philippines in July 1941. In fact, until December 1941, MacArthur had been consistently betrayed from the highest levels of command, and as a result suffered the disaster in the Philippines.

That horrendous cost of lives haunted him until the betrayal by another Democrat President, who ordered him to stand down in Korea. He balked and was fired!

"Duty, Honor, Country" — those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be.* He reiterated those three words Seven times in his departing West Point speech!

In my further study of WW II Part 2 The Pacific War! I will cover more on the events in this theater of operation. I have always been more interested in the Pacific War, with the deepest respect for General Douglas MacArthur and have learned his whole life was emblematic of intellect, military acumen, courage, and heroism!

After Pearl Harbor and the Philippines, we knew another attack was imminent, but the question was when and where! We had successfully kept the secret of our code breaking and were intercepting Japanese message traffic.

The Japanese had been using the code "AF" for the attack destination, and our Washington team believed AF stood for the Aleutian Islands, but the Hawaiian team believed Midway was the real target.

Joe Rochefort, head of the research desk on Oahu, used a clever trick to learn the true destination. He had the commander on Midway send an open plain text message advising their desalination equipment had failed, and they needed emergency water.

The Japanese picked up the message and notified the support units of the attacking force, that they would need additional water at the destination, as the island now had a major water shortage. That message was intercepted at HYPO and Rochefort was then able to advise Eddie Layton, Nimitz Intel officer, that the attack was to be on Midway! Layton was then able to convince Nimitz!

Nimitz actually risked his career on this trick. If the attack had really been the Aleutians, he would have been in defiance of Washington! However, if Midway had fallen, the Japanese would then have had land bomber base from which to further attack our command in Hawaii, and then potentially move on to attack the American mainland.

With MacArthur's air force defeated in the Philippines, the loss of Midway and Hawaii could well have changed the whole course of the Pacific War! Instead, this was a main turning point and Nimitz was surely a Blue Water Patton! We tend to hear a lot more about his subordinate Admirals, like "Bull" Halsey, but Nimitz was central to America's victory in the Pacific Ocean War and Eddie Layton was his intel genius!

The war with Japan was not to end quickly. The politically driven plan from the War Department and Army Air Force Headquarters helps us understand how the December 8 disaster in the Philippines occurred, and why we were potentially Doomed at the Start with the lack of a proper Philippine defense. Like Benghazi in our time, we still have the Sixty-Four-dollar question -- who was leading the betrayal of the Philippines Defense? Clearly traceable to Washinton and the Presidential level, which had been in withholding information on the Hawaiian attack.

What were all the circumstances that caused MacArthur's air commander, General Lewis Hyde Brereton, to not intercept the Japanese air attack coming from the island of Formosa? MacArthur had knowledge of the Pearl Harbor attack, had Japanese Purple Code intelligence, and his radar unit at Iba had supposedly warned of the approaching Japanese. I will have much more to say on all this in my Part 2!

The result at Clark Field was the virtual destruction of the grounded Far East Air Force (FEAF), the largest force of warplanes outside the United States. This disaster precipitated the fall of the American Commonwealth of the Philippines, and the resource rich British Malaya and the Dutch East Indies.

MacArthur later received Presidential orders to retreat to Australia, prior to the defeat of our forces. The American army suffered the largest defeat in its history with the fall of Bataan. The Japanese then killed an estimated 11,000 American and Filipino war prisoners during the Horrific Bataan Death March. Those that survived where incarcerated under brutal conditions for the duration of the War!

The Philippine defeat was on a much greater scale than what had occurred at Pearl Harbor, and it insured the war in the Pacific would NOT be a short one. Japan's planned search for resources was supposed to go either north across the Manchurian border, or south toward Indonesia. Japan was now totally committed to a South Pacific War and would not be a threat to the Soviets on their Eastern Front!

14. End of the Pacific War, VJ Day August 14, 1945

There is also significant evidence that communists in our government not only influenced the start of the Pacific War but were also protracting the end of the conflict.

Again, for the benefit of the Soviets, who needed time to position themselves to benefit in Asia as they would in Eastern Europe!

Prior to the Yalta conference, MacArthur had advised the Japanese were willing to surrender, but again, KGB agents and fellow travelers persuaded FDR to reject any surrender rumors. Later at Yalta, Communist agent Alger Hiss was also helping Roosevelt agree to everything Stalin was demanding, all to our disadvantage.

None other than Owen Lattimore, deputy director of Pacific Affairs and the Office of War Information, was influencing the continuance of the war even in the face of alleged peace proposals from the Japanese. No surprise since Lattimore had been a communist agent, spy, and traitor since the middle 1930s.

Harry Hopkins led the diplomatic atmosphere favoring a continuation of all-out war with Japan. Hopkins was the Soviet agent Roosevelt had chosen as his closest adviser.

Army Chief of Staff George C. Marshall was also a hard liner against any early Japanese surrender and maintained his plans for a full-scale invasion. In the 1930's, Marshall had been on the Board of the Institute of Pacific Relations (IPR). Other staffers who had been involved with the IPR were communists Alger Hiss, Laughlin Currie, and Owen Lattimore.

America's interference with the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, as well as our economic sanctions, embargos and withdrawal demands regarding China had successfully turned our former ally into an enemy.

Japan was not going to abandon their defenses along the Manchurian border, as they still feared aggression from the Soviets. Northeast China was their western defense perimeter just as the Pacific Mandates were, against the America they no longer trusted and had come to fear. So goes the old saying, "Walk a mile in their shoes!"

In 1945, Truman sent Marshall to China to broker a peace between Chiang Kai-shek and Mao Tse-tung. Marshall relied on the advice of his Protégé, Lt General "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell who hated the Nationalist leader.

Assigned to Stilwell was Communist John Stewart Service, one of our most important Far East diplomats during the Asian war. Because of the advice Marshall took from Stilwell, he did little to assist Chiang. Marshall's failure in China was surely a disaster, which helped the communist victory on the continent.

Ultimately, John Stewart Service was arrested over the Amerasia scandal; and Marshall was appointed Secretary of State to implement the Hoover plan in Germany. Marshall would have leaned more toward the disastrous ideas of Henry Morgenthau, which were to destroy all German industry and render the Nation an agrarian state.

After a German surrender, the plan was the Soviets would enter the Pacific War. Their declaration of war on Japan came only days after our second atomic attack had preempted any need for their participation.

Our following concessions in Outer Mongolia and Manchuria then enabled the transference of massive stockpiles of Japanese arms to the Soviets. A cache ultimately transferred to Mao Tse-tung, enabling the Communist forces to continue their war against the Nationalist Chinese.

As already mentioned, the Soviets began an invasion of Korea, and America had to move forces from Okinawa to stem the Soviet incursion resulting in the famous 38th Parallel and later the Korean War!

Thousands of casualties were victims of the treachery to extend the Pacific conflict by at least six months. In both Europe and Asia, the real winners were Josef Stalin, Mao Tse-tung, and the world communist government that still threatens us today! Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman, and their communist agents who manipulated policy are the ones to hold accountable.

Truman was doing everything he could to ignore, bury, and gloss over the history of the Communist Democrat party! He issued more Top-Secret edicts than FDR, to cover the Communist legacy of the Roosevelt administration, including the Amerasia conspiracy, America's pro-communist effort in China.

We destroyed Chiang Kai-shek's chances against Mao, and later the Korean War was Truman's disaster. His famous Truman Doctrine was just a cover to project he was anti communist, while he continued to protect traitors in his own government and then refused to win the Korean War.

However, we were lucky to have Truman replace Henry Wallace in the 1944 election. Wallace was a known communist Roosevelt had selected as his Vice President in 1940! Even the Communist Democrats were worried about him staying on the 1944 ticket. If he had, with Roosevelt's death, America would have had a communist President to fulfill the FDR/Stalin plan. Wallace later ran on the CPUSA ticket against Truman in 1948! Truman beat Wallace, but unfortunately Dewey too!

Again, imagine if Britain had not gotten themselves in a war over Poland and the Danzig corridor! Imagine if in 1939, America and Britain still had Japan as an ally. Imagine the Soviets fighting a two-front war with the Germans to their West, the Japanese to their East, no Lend Lease, and Britain and America watching!

Hitler did not burn Paris; he turned his attention East as he always said he would. In addition, many historians think Hitler would have been easier to contain than the Soviet monster to which we gave birth. No Korea, no Cold War, no Vietnam. Even a China where Chiang might have survived and made the whole nation a model of what Taiwan became! All lost by criminal treason and diplomatic stupidity.

In the Pacific Theater, I want to acknowledge Rear Admiral Edwin T. Layton and his incomparable book "And I Was There". Admiral Arleigh Burke, CNO, considered Layton's book "...one of the most important to come out of World War II..."

The only thing Layton missed was the later proven complicity of Roosevelt and the communists in the American government. Admiral Layton does allude to it, but just cannot bring himself to believe his Commander-in-Chief was a traitor.

Admiral Layton died in 1984, the year before his estate released his book. The more sinister story of Washington's complicity had not been confirmed until the Venona decrypts were released by the NSA in 1995, corroborating the treason. Still, Eddie Layton's book provides an incomparable sweeping history of the Pacific War.

15. Communist legacy of Roosevelt

So why is all this still important today? Both Hitler and the Japanese wanted to destroy communism. Mein Kampf makes it clear Germany feared the possibility that Bolshevism would sweep over the Continent. Churchill was also anti-communist but his German animus and his wish for British Continental hegemony got in the way of any good judgment, reflecting badly on his choices as a Statesman.

In America, the Great Depression had shaken faith in the capitalist system that had built our Nation, all to the advantage of the Roosevelt Administration, infested with Communists, fellow travelers, and KGB and NKVD agents in charge of policy.

Harry Hopkins was the top Soviet agent in America, and he lived in the White House and was FDR's principal advisor. All the rest from Harry Dexter White to Henry Morgenthau, and later Alger Hiss were in control with the tacit blessings of FDR, the principal Socialist in America who even tolerated a Communist Vice President in Henry Wallace.

I am not going to argue if FDR was a communist, but he was surely a radical socialist beholden exclusively to Joseph Stalin! Moreover, long ago, another good friend had taught me a Communist is just a Socialist in a hurry!

FDR would have to have been a complete fool to be unaware of his Administration's actions, and what they were facilitating in Asia and Europe -- sadly, all for the benefit of the Soviet Union! "Operation Snow" embroiled us in a Pacific War, and the final disaster at Yalta gave away an American victory and opened the door for Stalin to begin his ruthless plan of world domination!

In the 1930's and beyond, Communists facilitated their goals clandestinely with agents in the KGB. They did not even communicate directly with each other, let alone act openly.

16. Communism in America Post WWII

Another whole essay could be written on the Joe McCarthy story, so well covered by the late M. Stanton Evans. Know-nothings blame McCarthy for the Hollywood "Black List" which they are still making so much of with the movie Trumbo. Dalton Trumbo was a true communist for whom even Kirk Douglas "carried water", putting his name back on the credits of Spartacus, for which Trumbo had written the screenplay.

Martin Dies was the United States Congressman from Texas, who was heading the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) investigation of Hollywood communists. Joe McCarthy was a United States Senator from Wisconsin heading a Senate investigation of the US Army Signal Corps at Fort Monmouth, NJ.

All that still rings in our ears are the cry "Have you no decency sir", a question to McCarthy by Joseph Welch at the Army-McCarthy hearings on June 9, 1954. McCarthy was just very politely trying to get Welch, the President and lead counsel of the law firm defending the Army, to admit the young lawyer his firm had assigned to the case had a communist background!

In addition, McCarthy later exposed the Rosenberg's who were selling our atomic secrets to the Soviets. Truman, and even Eisenhower, disparaged McCarthy in fear of him potentially exposing their WWII complicity!

Now, in our new Century, American Capitalism had been dragged into a nightmare jokingly referred to as "Crony Capitalism", and our once land of the free has come close to being openly communist. This is what can happen when a welfare state produces mass dependency; and the dependants need to keep those in office who provide for their needs.

The future of the American Republic is now uncertain! We have become a 48-52 Nation, with the 52% representing the Socialist, Communist Democrat Party. Many of us clearly remember what America had been, even with all our Communist interference, we were a great Nation.

America was once mostly composed of around 220 million LEGAL immigrants and their progeny. America is now composed of around 320 million, with the vast number of the additional 100 million being ILLEGAL immigrants, and many of them with additional felony criminal records. Most of the rest are third world legal immigrates who have not assimilated, and do not bring any value to America.

All these millions are here under a Democrat Communist plan to pack our cities with welfare dependant Democrats, who will vote for those providing their Communist social welfare.

Their ultimate plan is to do away with the Electoral College, and control America with about ten cities in ten states. You will be hearing more and more about the injustice of the Electoral College, and the "fairness" of the popular vote. Once this happens the Communists will have won, and the only shots fired will be the ones they engineered and facilitated to repeal the Second Amendment!

It seems Obama may be an even more flagrant liar and imposter than many suspected. His father was more likely Frank Marshall Davis! All his sealed records prevent any understanding that Davis was most likely the Communist who raised and trained him during all his formative years! What other reasons would anyone have to seal his or her entire personal history?

Either way, Communism in America has evolved into Islamunism with roots traceable to the foundation laid by FDR and all the Socialist and Communist traitors who came with, and after, his regime. Moreover, by 2016 Islam had permeated every level of our government from the African Indonesian Muslim who had been in the White House, to virtually every member of the Obama senior administration

This Progressive destruction of our Constitutional government is a disaster that was no secret! We should have been arresting, prosecuting and even executing many of them, just as we had Rosenberg's, but America had lost its will to resist and we came to the brink in 2016. Now, as I edit this paper in 2023, it seems the end of the America we knew is on the horizon!

Now decades removed from FDR, we are still facing the communist inexorable quest! We just survived eight years of Communist/Islamist criminal control and came close to hiding this treason and continuing it, if the admitted Progressive Communist criminal Democrat Hillary Clinton had become America's President Elect in 2016!

Clinton offered the same rotten impossible dream of Universal Basic Income, social justice, peace on earth, and economic equality for all. This system appeals to the masses who want a "heaven" on earth, and to the elites who want total power over the masses.

The survival of communism has weaved its deadly way through two World Wars and provided the legacy for Korea, the Cold War, Vietnam and the continued instability we face today with Russia, China and their proxies.

Worse, by 2016 the United States of America faced the threat of an Islamist National Government. At the very least Obama was a Muslim sympathizer who had surrounded himself with traitors from the Muslim Brotherhood, just as FDR had surrounded himself with communist traitors. If the Communist Democrats had won in 2016, they would have continued the Obama legacy with the ultimate objective of their "Fundamental Change", NOT the preserving of American values!

Even Republicans are weakening in the face of our new "Bastardized" Electorate. We call them Republicans in Name Only (RINO's), but some are even worse than that. One example would be George W. Bush who once even took a bribe from the Muslim Brotherhood, in the form of a political donation. At the time, he was still governor of Texas, and about to run for his first term as President!

I hope the Russia investigation that started with the hope of destroying real Republican Constitutionalists may end up indicting and imprisoning many of our Communists who really did collude with the Russians.

To argue that Roosevelt had no idea Harry Hopkins was a top Soviet agent, or that Harry Dexter White was taking him to war with Japan, requires one to admit FDR was a clueless fool ultimately led by Alger Hiss to our disgrace at Yalta!

Likewise, to argue Obama was not in league with communists and Islamists also flies in the face of reality. In fact, we were dealing with an Islamunism, an amalgam of the two forces Obama was using to fulfill his claim of "Fundamental Change" for America, in fact to destroy America.

A Communist secular economic political system is not a good fit with a death cult masquerading as a religion. Therefore, they will ultimately be at war with each other in a final move for total control by either worldwide communism or a global Caliphate of Sharia!

17. America today

We have always associated Capitalism with America, and we came very close to ending our heritage and adopting communism. Our only bulwark has been our Constitution.

Capitalism is our American system of the private ownership of capital, a concept that has been under attack in America for more than one hundred years.

Fascism is a matter of degree. It can be either positive cooperation or negative strangulation! This strangulation aspect accelerated under Obama and became our new economic system of bundling the public and private sectors under his authoritarian hierarchical government.

The Italian word fascio means to bundle. Hegel called it a "Religion of State" and Obama euphemized it as just "Crony Capitalism". A perfect example was the Obama Government capitalizing General Motors for an ultimate taxpayer loss of $10.5 billion.

Then we had confused hooded gangs of Communist Anti Fascists, under ANTIFA banners, attacking benign Fascism in America and calling Capitalist Trump a Nazi!

Socialism has a very broad base in our Communist Democrat Party. This system advocates the state ownership of industry, with an economic system based on the state ownership of capital, as well as the redistribution of wealth.

To facilitate this agenda Democrat Communists are virile opponents of the Second Amendment of the US Constitution. They will not be able to facilitate their ultimate Communist objectives of Social Justice, Universal Basic Income, and equality for all until they disarm honest working Americans.

Communism has long been the end objective of Communist Democrats in America. This is the most virulent form of socialism, which abolishes private ownership, and uses the barrel of a gun to enforce the political theory of collectivism in a classless society.

Intelligent patriots defeated Clinton, the presumptive 2016 Communist Democratic Presidential candidate! She was a self-proclaimed Progressive, which has long been a code word for Communist, and at best a radical Socialist.

Historically we have associated Fascism with Italy, Socialism with Germany and Communism with the Soviet Union and China! Ostensibly, Fascism ended when the Communists shot and hung Mussolini; Socialism ended when Hitler supposedly committed suicide; and we thought Communism was defeated with the end of the Cold War...again, all ostensibly!

All those wanting to collapse the American system knew the Constitution was the last, and only, thing in their way. Very dangerously, they also knew the Achilles heel of the Constitution was the Second Amendment, ergo the constant pressure for repeal! Like the proverbial sweater thread, when pulled hard enough, an initial tug will ultimately unravel the entire structure!

The continuing manifold assault on the Second Amendment should have been obvious to everyone. In fact, I will go so far as to suggest those leading this assault are engineering the False Flag mass shootings we have been experiencing!

A few hundred dead are meaningless to cabals, and history is replete with millions upon millions sacrificed to achieve systems that collectivize and disarm the masses for the benefit of elites! America will not solve this cancer until the "Deep State" is unmasked, dismantled, indicted and incarcerated.

I thought Obama's State-mandated healthcare cartel was his principal tool for income redistribution, collectivization, and control. However, his plan had not moved rapidly enough. Remember, a communist is just a socialist in a hurry!

It appears urban riots and mass shootings will continue to be the norm, until we eradicate the principle Communist Democrat "policy drivers" to disarm Americans, instead of enforcing the law! The Internet has even been alive with official suggestions that the Government even needs to use the UN if necessary.

The technique in use is the Hegelian Dialectic. A simple three-step process of:

- First, creating a problem (Thesis)
- Second, using fear and panic to create opposition to the problem (Antithesis)
- Thirdly, providing a solution that would not have been accepted without achieving the psychological conditioning provided in stages one and two (Synthesis).

This is the process to dismantle our social and political structures and emasculate our sovereignty.

The complicity with these mass murders is too obvious to ignore with their fall guy selection, funding, mind-altering manipulation and the ultimate cover-ups. I suspect the Obama "Deep State" as having been the architect of these proxy murders.

Evidence also continues to suggest that Black Lives Matter, working with the Black Panthers will continue to foster riots in our major cities. No one seems to know, or it is not politically correct to remember, the Communists have long used unwitting blacks as the principal agent of our domestic chaos and urban riots. Even more dangerous is the Nation of Islam, led by Louis Farrakhan!

With Hispanics now outnumbering blacks, a Communist strategy also seems to be underway to use Latinos the same as they have historically used blacks. Latino separatist groups like La Raza surely support this. I fear the principal driver for Latinos will be the Communization of the Catholic Church.

In 2016, we won a stunning political victory but the tool of anarchy is still in play under the funding of players like George Soros and the continuing agenda of Obama, and his band of communists under a banner of Organize for Action (OFA).

More than ten years ago, I read Civil War II, by Thomas W. Chittum which then seemed like an impossible end for our beautiful free Nation. Written in 1995, it spelled out in detail how America could be defeated and dismembered.

The goals were to repeal the Second Amendment, unravel the Bill of Rights and suspend the United States Constitution. We were already living in what Jonah Goldberg euphemistically called Liberal Fascism.

Following this would have been a more virulent totalitarian system, the fruition of Obama's "Deep State" plan to end American exceptionalism, with a final grand push of "Fundamental Change". We had been about to learn what it is like to be a poor civilian in the current country of Venezuela, or what it was once like on the Continent of Europe in the 1940's!

Now all we hear about is Russia! After reading this paper, I am sure you now know why. Everyone wants to investigate Republican Russian collusion, while unmistakable evidence proves the American Communist Democrat Party, its candidates, and its funding entity the Democratic National Committee (DNC) conducted the collusion.

Between August 1945 and November 1946, Lt General Mark C. Clark was serving as American high commissioner for Austria; his counterpart was Colonel General A. S. Zheltov, a high-ranking officer in the Russian NKVD. The experience taught General Clark what America would face, both politically and militarily, with the Soviets. The stage was being set for all that would follow to this day!

By 1961, Soviet and American tanks were facing off in Berlin; and President John F. Kennedy had appointed Stewart Pittman Assistant Secretary for civil defense, the nation's first chief of nuclear war preparedness. Pittman was an international investment-banking attorney, who had been chief counsel for the Marshall Plan.

Within a year, Pittman had dispatched federal workers to every part of the country to inventory subway systems and public buildings with the objective of creating shelters with enough food, water, and medical supplies to protect 180 million Americans during the first week or two, when exposure to radioactive fallout was the most perilous.

Congress balked at the estimated $3 billion cost, as did State officials regarding an additional $3 billion in matching funds. Within three years, Pittman resigned in frustration amid heated debates over ethics, feasibility, and cost, which in today's dollars would have been more than $45 Billion.

Once speaking at the United Nations in New York City, the late Soviet Premier, Nikita Khrushchev, took off his shoe and started pounding it on his desk. He wanted to emphasize the Soviet Union would never fight a war with the United States. Rather, communism would just destroy America from within!

Now, it is obvious this is exactly what all foreign and domestic communists have been and are doing.

The Cold War was between Capitalism and Communism. However, Capitalism did not win with the end of the Soviet Union. Russia was the core of that union; and it is still a Communist nation under a single ruling party. The Cold War never ended; it just entered a new phase of world domination.

Wake up America! Be aware of and address the fact that the enemy has infiltrated our government and is now fighting us from within. They call themselves Democrats, supported by a legion of 'useful idiots' all helping to undermine our culture and destroy our Nation!

America has been "led" into this disastrous and precarious position. We have been controlled by traitors who have destroyed our military, were about to destroy our freedom, and had doubled our national debt!

Debt is the primary issue! America is now more than $21 Trillion in debt, our financial system is broken, and the only answer is more debt!

In the 1930s, our principal enemy was Communism, as covert agents swarmed through our government. Under Obama, the agenda became overt! The United States government had openly fallen under the control of the Muslim Brotherhood, and was embracing Sharia, the principal enemy of our Constitution. No one had done a thing to stop this treasonous sellout of our sovereignty, as an African, Indonesian Muslim led us to catastrophe. The worst would have been fulfilled under Hillary Clinton!

However, make no mistake "Deep State" Communists and Islamists are NOT done! "Islamunism" is alive and well in all branches of our government we jokingly call the "Swamp"!

18. Europe Today

In 1973, French author Jean Raspail wrote The Camp of the Saints, an incendiary warning for Europe. By 1975, it was available in English for all to read! Now it is unfolding just as he said.

The Obama Administration led and funded the collapse of North Africa, the Middle East, and South Asia. The weapon they unleashed was Refugees! The plan first hit Europe, and now threatens to engulf America.

What do you think will happen if Europe potentially awakens? Will we see acquiescence and collapse, or an event that will cause the Holocaust to pale by comparison! Foreign agents, treason, stupidity, political ambition, and greed caused the former disasters in Europe and Asia; the same forces are still operative today!

Consider the fate of the poor Jews in Europe. In the 1930s, Jews were mostly shopkeepers and minor moneylenders. European Jewry suffered under the legacy of Marx and the Communist Manifesto, and the actions of the major banks controlled by the Rothschild's.

There was no "Jihad" to rule Europe from poor and middle-class Jews. However, Europeans watched quietly as they were rounded up and exterminated. Now the only question is, with the threat of our new "Borderless World", who will be rounded up and exterminated this time?

France has long been the most Socialist, even communist, nation in Western Europe. After the "Phoney War", they left Churchill "holding the bag"; and later Vichy elements of the French militarily confronted the American and British landings in North Africa.

The Muslim French colony of Morocco achieved independence in 1956. However, this link to Islam seems to have infected the entire Nation of France. Major cities like Marseilles are now absolute "no go" zones and even areas of Paris are ungovernable. The entire country seems destined to succumb to a new wave of Islamunism!

German Socialists continue to have a dark Red streak. WWII destroyed the Nazis but saved the German Communists, who simply hide their true politics under a more benign Socialism. Communist Willy Brandt spent WWII in Sweden; and former German Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder opposed a free market economy.

Chancellor Angela Merkel was born in West Germany but was raised in the East. She entered politics in the wake of the 1989 Revolutions; and in 1990, was a reunification spokesperson for the East German Government.

During Merkel's Chancellorship, the migrant crisis has been one of the major issues she refused to confront. However, she was the longest-serving head of government in the European Union and considered the most powerful woman in the world.

The British seem destined to the same fate as their French ally. Once credited, along with Churchill, as having saved Europe, the nation then ready to fight on the beaches has not even been up to stemming a Muslim invasion via the Chunnel.

This once protected island is no longer safe for British citizens as the Parliament is deaf to Muslim raping and murdering. The Mayor of London is a Muslim and Britain, like many on the mainland of Europe, is already falling under Sharia Law! This is not too surprising given the Mayor of New York City is now a communist.

In an attempt to save Britain, the UK has voted to leave the European Union on March 29, 2019. This will not protect their now lawless Nation or a London with one of the highest murder rates in the world. The event will just lead to economic conditions that will just exacerbate their already existing problems. The British have lost their identity and soon all of Europe will have, too!

Does anyone see the pattern here?!

19. A final note on Liberal Fascism

Jonah Goldberg's Liberal Fascism is an excellent book. It is very professionally researched and written, and provides a sweeping understanding of not only Fascism, but also National Socialism and the American left. I learned a great deal and would consider Goldberg a polymath of 20th Century history and the American Left!

On the negative side, he is more than disappointing with his utter and complete misunderstanding of Nietzsche! His only references to Nietzsche are to the book The Will To Power. After Nietzsche's death, his sister commissioned the book, and Peter Gast, one of Nietzsche's friends, pulled his rough notes together to create the text.

It was never Nietzsche's intent to have his rough notes published as a book. However, even his notes make it perfectly clear the concept of a will to power has absolutely nothing to do with what Goldberg tries to hammer home with repeated unfair barbs! At one point, I even contemplated not finishing his book. I persevered, and I am glad I did, because other than Goldberg's uninformed ideas about Nietzsche it is an excellent and informative work.

I had already read The Will To Power twice in 1985 and 1989; but just to be sure, I read the complete 575-page book again, finishing it among other projects on 10/19/2015.

Even in his notes, Nietzsche makes it clear the Overman or Übermensch is the Exceptional Man. The will to power is a formula for life -- "...a Roman Caesar with Christ's soul"... A will to knowledge, character, perfection, and strength in the face of the abyss -- Death!

Nietzsche hated anti-Semitism, was anti Hegel, despised the State, would have hated Hitler, left Germany for Switzerland, and was a champion of the individual and an enemy of the collective!

Goldberg does not refer to any of this, or the many books Nietzsche actually wrote, nor does he seem to know any more about Nietzsche than he has heard from others!

My Biography

Robert Lee Rohrer

I am now retired after 40 years in sales and marketing management. My early career included 10 years in the general aviation business as Marketing Communications Manager for Aircraft Radio Corporation, and later a Sales and Marketing Manager with the RCA Aviation Systems Division. I was then also a licensed pilot and had passed the written test for a commercial rating. The story of my Aviation Days is on the My Life page of my website as are also my Amateur Expert days of motocross and long distant desert racing .

After aviation, I spent several years in the advertising business in Los Angeles, CA as Account Executive for Yamaha motorcycles. During this time, I was continually active in motocross, Grand Prix, and desert racing.

My later positions included Western Region Manager, General Sales Manager and Vice President Marketing and Sales with AMF Harley-Davidson; Vice President Marketing of Truck Stops of America; Senior Vice President/General Manager Ryder Fleet Control Services; Senior Vice President, Executive Director, Verex Assurance Corporation, and President and CEO of Gray Line Worldwide.

I graduated from the University of Southern California, with a BS in Business Administration with a major in marketing; and later completed two Senior Management Programs at the Harvard Business School.

Prior to my business career, I served for six years in the United States Marine Corps and the Marine Corps Reserve, with more than four years of active duty.

My wife Jonnie and I live in Bermuda Run, North Carolina. We have two married sons, and two granddaughters.
